Toronto Strike

Paper Late, Greeted By Scuffles

TORONTO (UPI) — The Toronto Globe and Mail, one of three city newspapers hit by a typographers' strike Thursday, produced a thin single edition this morning and loaded it aboard trucks for delivery amid scenes of minor violence and bitter inter-union feeling.

La Presse Talks Off Indefinitely

MONTREAL (CP) — Media- tion proceedings have been postponed indefinitely between Montreal's largest paper, La Presse, and striking members of the International Typographical Union (ITU).

When the typographers went on strike they said one of the main issues was automation in printing plants.

The Star, Canada's largest daily, and the Telegram were expected to follow suit later today in a bid to print their papers without the International Typographical Union. The 680 ITU members employed by the three papers walked off their jobs Thursday in a dispute over automation of part of the type-setting operation.

MACHINES DAMAGED

The Globe revealed this morning that several machines in the type-setting department were found to be damaged after the compositors walked out. The Telegram also reported mechanical trouble.

The Globe's composing room was staffed Thursday night by editorial employees and management, but all other unions stayed on the job. A cheer sounded through the press room when the first papers rolled off the giant press.

JEERS, SCUFFLES

Truckers hauled the papers away through jeering ITU pickets. Scuffles broke out several times between members of different unions, and several members were carted off in police paddy wagons.

Shortly after the papers appeared on the loading ramp, three members of the Globe management appeared in front of the ramp to face pickets and about 100 small-hour spectators. ITU members milled around the trio, shouting "scab" and "you sold us down the drain."

DROWNED OUT

Editor-in-chief James L. Cooper tried to explain the paper's position in the dispute, and now management intended to continue publication, but was drowned out by encircling union members until police suggested he and the others return to the building. As they made their way back, an unidentified man swung at Earle B. Richards, vice-president in charge of finance. Richards was not injured and the man was hustled off by police.

CONTINUE TALKS

In a front-page statement in today's Globe, Cooper said, "As promised, the newspapers will continue to negotiate" with the union.

Tax Man Charged

MONTREAL (UPI) — An official of the local federal revenue department branch was being sought by police Thursday on charges of taking bribes.

Lucien Prevost, 50, chief assessment officer at the branch, is charged with a breach of trust and of accepting almost $100,000 in bribes during a 19-year period from Jan. 1, 1945, to May 11, 1964.

Diefenbaker Wants 'Confederation' Parley

Let's Find Old Formula for Unity

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition leader Diefenbaker called Thursday for a pre-Confederation type of conference to find a way to keep Canadians together in Confederation in the future.

He told the Commons the conference should be attended by representatives of federal and provincial governments and all political parties in Canada. The delegates should meet behind closed doors away from the glare of publicity "to arrive at decisions regarding the future of this nation." The Opposition leader made his proposal in a speech on a government resolution, preparatory to introduction of a bill to implement the federal-provincial agreements reached at the fiscal conferences last November and at Easter. NDP leader Douglas said Mr. Diefenbaker's suggestion for a conference to study the future of Confederation was useful. It might end the constant haggling which now threatened Confederation. Mr. Diefenbaker said he does not look at Canada as a series of sovereign states "but of one Canada" with equal partner-

British MPs Have Own Work

Canada's a Bother

LONDON (Reuters) — Harold Wilson, leader of the opposition Labor Party, told the House of Commons Thursday it should not have to use its time legislating on Canadian matters. The House is due to discuss next Wednesday a bill dealing with Canada's proposed contributory pension plan. Conservative MP Ronald Bell replied some members did not share Wilson's views and would be sorry to see a change in the existing procedure.

Ohio Delegation 'Freed'

Has Barry Bagged It?

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Senator Barry Goldwater Thursday apparently sewed up a first-ballot nomination as the Republican presidential nominee when the key Ohio delegation was released from its favorite-son commitment.

The action by the pivotal Buckeye state delegation assured the Arizona Senator of at least 40 additional delegates when the convention roll is called next Wednesday, and possibly all of the state's 58.

DELEGATES RELEASED

But Rhodes announced only a few hours after arriving on the convention scene that he was releasing the delegates to vote their convictions. Goldwater had roared into this teeming convention city Thursday with a flat declaration that he was "more confident than I have ever been that I will win" the presidential nomination on the first ballot.

Scranton 'Shocked' At Magazine Story

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Governor Scranton accused Senator Goldwater Thursday of "reckless comments" about war and peace which have become "a matter of grave national concern."

Scranton, who is trying to overtake Goldwater's huge lead for the Republican presidential nomination, called two news conferences to attack the Arizona senator. Earlier, he asked the GOP platform committee to reject Goldwater philosophies.

In today's second news conference, Scranton demanded that Goldwater make public the full transcript of a June 30 interview with Der Spiegel, a German news magazine. Scranton maintained it was "leaking out in dribs and drabs."

The Pennsylvania governor said he was shocked to read a news report on the interview saying that Goldwater, if president, would tell the joint chiefs of staff that a decision had been made to win in Vietnam and "now the problem is yours."

Scranton said the nation's president is not the same as a chairman of the board, one who can let others decide when nuclear weapons should be used.

The Viet Nam comment attributed to Goldwater, Scranton said, was similar to other statements by the Arizona senator about control of nuclear weapons.

In his demand that the full transcript of the interview be supplied to the platform committee when Goldwater appears today, Scranton said: "We are no longer dealing in a game of simple Republican politics. Now we are talking about the welfare of nearly 200 million Americans."

War Risk in Asia

BOSS BACKS 'BRINK' TALK

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite sharp Senate charges of "brinkmanship," Defence Secretary Robert S. McNamara backed two top U.S. military leaders who said the United States is prepared to risk war with Communist China to preserve South Viet Nam's independence.

McNamara told the Senate foreign relations committee at a closed session June 23 that the U.S. effort to save South Viet Nam "carries the risk of escalating to military actions outside the border of South Viet Nam."

DEFENDS STATEMENTS

In his testimony, released Thursday, McNamara defended statements made in separate interviews by Admiral Harry D. Felt, out-going commander-in-chief of U.S. forces in the Pacific, and Gen. Paul D. Harkins, retiring commander of the American advisory and training mission to South Viet Nam.

McNamara was questioned sharply about the interviews by both Democrats and Republicans. Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper, ranking Republican member of the committee, demanded to know "who speaks for American policy?"

BRINKMANSHIP

"They say something this committee has not been told is official American policy," Hickenlooper said.

"Isn't that a form of brinkmanship that they are playing?" asked chairman J. W. Fulbright (Dem. Ark.). "They don't wish to say that we won't fight under any circumstances and they don't want the president to pledge this."

SEEKING DETERRENCE

McNamara told the committee that the U.S. is seeking to develop "a sufficiently strong military posture to deter our opponents from either political or military aggression, and through that deterrence to avoid a breakdown of the peace."

McNamara said no responsible military or civilian official in the defence department has spoken on a foreign policy matter without specific approval from the highest ranks of the U.S. government.

STOPPED SHORT

But he stopped short of saying that President Johnson had authorized Felt or Harkins to speak out on risking war with Communist China.

"I simply want to say that Admiral Felt's statement was in conformity with the established policy of our government," McNamara said.

Plane Explodes 39 Persons Die

NEWPORT, Tenn. (UPI) — A United Airlines Viscount carrying 39 persons apparently exploded in the air tonight and rained bodies and flaming wreckage over rugged country at the foot of the Great Smoky mountains. Searchers found no sign of life.

U.S. Determined

Asian Crisis Seen If Reds Call Bluff

OTTAWA (UPI) — External Affairs Minister Martin said Thursday that the southeast Asia conflict could reach crisis proportions if Communist China underestimates the determination of the United States.

OWN FUTURE

Martin, briefing members of the external affairs committee on the international situation, said he did not feel that further conferences, suggested by the Communist Chinese, would provide an answer to the problems in that area. He added, however, that China, as a member of the International Truce Supervisory Commission in Laos, would participate in any conference that was called. He said the situation was dangerous "because the challenge is from an adversary which has become so isolated from the west that it cannot be counted on accurately to assess United States' purpose and determination." He said the U.S. government has clearly stated that "it seeks no selfish advantage in Viet Nam—no territory and no bases."

OWN FUTURE

"It seeks only the consolidation of a government free from outside attack and at liberty to determine its own future," Martin declared. "If Hanoi and Peking do not accept this objective as a legitimate one, the risk is that they may, in pursuing their own expansionist aims, provoke a dangerous confrontation."

New Tough Policy Drafted by China

LONDON (UPI) — Communist China's top leadership has laid down a new "tough" strategy against Moscow and the United States in a series of meetings with provincial political chiefs, party and army representatives, diplomatic despatches from behind the Bamboo Curtain said Thursday.

Peking's party and state leaders, including Mao Tse-tung; his heir apparent, Liu Shao-chi; Premier Chou En-lai, and army and provincial chiefs, were said to have taken the new hard line decisions in consultations which began about June 26 and lasted several days.

Diplomatic reports said according to available on-the-spot indications two major developments appear to have emerged: ● Peking's leadership confirmed Mao Tse-tung's Communist ideological line as the only valid one and rejected completely Soviet Premier Khrushchev's position as totally unacceptable "modern revisionism." This could rule out any chance of a settlement of the Sino-Soviet feud.

● At the same time Peking denounced the United States as the "prime enemy" of the world's peoples and as the "most ferocious aggressor."

Equality Only Hope

LONDON (CP) — In a speech warmly applauded by African leaders, Prime Minister Pearson said Thursday that without racial equality the Commonwealth is not likely to survive.

The basis of the new Commonwealth must be full racial equality without any discrimination of any kind, Pearson told the Commonwealth prime ministers' conference.

But he did not go into specific cases—and Southern Rhodesia was not mentioned—as he raised the racial issue during his broad look at the world political situation. The racial question, which most observers see as the most critical hurdle for the conference, will be tackled in earnest by the 18-member group today.

BEGAN BUBBLING

But with the delegates still on the first item of the agenda—a review of world political problems—the issue began bubbling to the surface during the first two days of the meeting. Prime Minister Albert Margal of Sierra

Road Sore Point For Turks, Greeks

NICOSIA, Cyprus (UPI) — Former EOKA underground leader Gen. George Grivas said Thursday he had not agreed to allow Turkish Cypriots to maintain their control of the strategic Nicosia-Kyrenia road.

Grivas, hero of the Greek Cypriot independence struggle against Britain, said he had not discussed the road "specifically" with Plaza.

Plaza's view of it is the only "breathing space" for the Turkish Cypriots.

"The Turkish Cypriots can use the whole area of the island to breathe and to this end we have extended a friendly hand, promising full security."

The Greek Cypriot press Thursday backed up Grivas with a bitter attack on Plaza's statement of last week. It appeared the Nicosia-Kyrenia road issue was becoming a point of major disagreement between the United Nations and the Greek Cypriots.

The former UN peace force commander, Lt. Gen. Prem Singh Gyani, flew meanwhile to Istanbul on his way to India, where he planned to retire. He had headed the UN operation in Cyprus since March 17.

United Canada Urged

ship between Canadians of English and French origin.

"I do not see a Canada far removed from the Canada of Cartier and Macdonald."

"Those men faced a tremendous challenge and they met it in co-operation," he said. "They did not dream of a Canada which would be bifurcated or multiplicated (if that word can be used), divided and uncertain."

"They thought of a central government which could discharge its responsibilities. They thought of provincial legislatures which would be able to maintain within their limits and territorial boundaries those things peculiar to those areas and those provinces."

Mr. Diefenbaker said that in the past western farmers had talked of separating from the rest of Canada. Leaders in the Maritimes had also taken strong stands against the injustices of Confederation but

"had always come back to one thing; that we stand together as one nation, one Canada."

The Opposition leader said "if we start breaking up the country into segments we destroy not only the hopes of the fathers of Confederation but our hope that we will be able to hand on to those that follow a Canada worthy of that heritage which is ours."

The time had come to convene a conference of representatives of the federal and provincial governments and of various political parties in all provinces to go into the whole field of Canadian Confederation.

It should not be a Dominion-provincial conference lasting for two days but a conference "in which, in a spirit of Canadian co-operation and pride, they will meet together and endeavor through discussion and consultation to arrive at decisions regarding the future of this nation."

Highwire Artist Plunges

CHEEKTOWAGA, N.Y. (UPI) — A veteran highwire artist fell 40 feet to her death Thursday night as her husband from an adjoining platform and an audience of 300 below watched transfixed with horror.

Betty Bergen, 34, of East Palatka, Fla., had just completed her act, taken off her safety belt, and was about to climb down a ladder when she lost her grip and fell backward, landing on a paved surface.

Police said her body struck a guy wire about 30 feet above the ground. Authorities at St. Joseph's Intercommunity Hospital here said she died of a broken neck.

Fred Bergen, who with his wife formed part of the aerial act called the Silver Condors, afterward told police that his wife had never been involved in any accident during her professional career.

The Hague and Wallace Circus has been playing here through the week giving three performances nightly at a local shopping centre, and was scheduled to depart Saturday.

Equality Only Hope

Leone Thursday criticized some of the older Commonwealth countries for not supporting the imposition of trade sanctions against South Africa.

There could be no lasting peace in the world so long as a large proportion of the people are held in subjugation, he said.

Pearson told the conference later, however, that he doubted the wisdom of any move to expel South Africa from agencies of the United Nations. He was reported to have said that it would be more advantageous to have South Africa within those agencies so any criticisms could at least be heard by her own delegates.

Sources said the Canadian prime minister spoke at length on world problems, offering a Canadian view on many of the issues that had been raised from other corners of the globe.

He pointed to Southeast Asia as the area in which there is the greatest threat to peace and said Canada regarded Indonesia's attitude as unreasonable and aggressive, and it was a matter of concern to other Commonwealth members to see Malaysia facing this threat. But sources said there was no foundation for published reports here that negotiations were under way for Canadian helicopters to be sent to Malaysia.

Reuters news agency quoted conference sources as saying both Canada and India have offered help to the Malaysian federation, which has been subjected to a policy of "confrontation" by Indonesia, opposed to the federation on the grounds it represents an extension of British colonialism in the Far East. British and Malaysian troops on Borneo, part of the federation, have been fighting an undeclared war against Indonesian guerrillas.

AID MALAYSIA

(Reuters quoted Pearson as telling the conference during its close-door meetings that Canada will help Malaysia in any way possible. T. T. Krishnamachari, India's finance minister, was quoted as saying his country is ready to make available its good offices to find a peaceful solution to the conflict.)

Pearson gave the delegates a summary of United States policy in Southeast Asia and he said this policy was based on the necessity of preserving the integrity of the states already established, and to prevent any new governments from being imposed through intervention from the Communist north.

OUTLINES PROPOSALS

Pearson also outlined his proposals for getting smaller countries to agree on contributing to the formation of a peace-keeping force that would be established, when required, within the framework of the United Nations. He said the forthcoming Ottawa conference on the question will be to seek agreement in principle so there would be no delay in forming a force when required.

He expressed hope that as many Commonwealth countries as possible would throw their support behind the plan.

RUSHED UP

Conference sources said that when the Canadian prime minister completed his speech several African delegates rushed up to shake his hand.

Pearson, who returned from the conference to dress in evening wear for a Buckingham Palace dinner, also being attended by the prime minister's wives, said he was "very optimistic" about the conference so far.

Pakistan President Ayub Khan told his fellow Commonwealth leaders that Communist China should be given a seat in the United Nations. Such a step, he said, would contribute to world peace and assist the UN.

Paper Late Amid Scuffles

edition has many shortcomings, but we promise with the support of our readers and with the help of our staff, including many members of responsible unions, to continue to try to improve our publication day by day.

AUTOMATION ISSUE

The composers struck in protest of the publishers' introduction of punched tape into the Linotype operation. The tape, punched by a computer, was regarded as dangerous automation by the union, who have been demanding jurisdiction over the machines, as well as their operators.

The publishers said through a spokesman Thursday night they "fear" the stoppage may be a long one.

MEETINGS SET

Negotiators for the papers have asked the union to meet with them on Monday, and both parties are scheduled to meet with provincial Labor Minister Leslie Rowntree next Tuesday.

The newspapers claim they have reached agreement on the automation dispute with the union local three times, only to have each agreement rejected by the parent ITU headquarters in Colorado Springs, Col.

AGREED RULES

"In these circumstances we felt it necessary to announce last week that new work rules that have been agreed to by the bargaining committee should be put into effect today," Star publisher J. S. Atkinson said Thursday night.

"We cannot permit the action of our composing room employees to jeopardize the interests of our many other employees, our advertisers and the general public," Atkinson said. "We stand ready to resume negotiations with the union, but in the meantime we will publish a paper."

The dispute, which simmered for 22 months while representatives of the papers—The Star, The Telegram and The Globe and Mail—and the International Typographical Union (ITU) negotiated a new contract, exploded from the talking stage shortly after 1 p.m.

WALKOUT SPARK

The spark was a company request for some composing room workers to handle typesetter tape at The Star and The Telegram, both afternoon papers. The printers refused, were suspended and all the composing room staff walked out. There are 680 ITU printers at the three papers.

Both The Star and Telegram came out with late afternoon editions but, apart from stories about the strike, most copy was in type before the walkout began.

Wilfred Healy, Toronto lawyer and official spokesman for the newspapers, said the dispute could be settled anytime but "I fear it might go on for a good long time."

American Trio Hit by Rebels

SAIGON (UPI) — Three American soldiers were wounded Thursday in a battle with Viet Cong guerrillas on the central highlands where Communist rebels appear to have launched a general offensive.

There were indications that troops of the North Vietnamese army are taking part in the new Communist push.

Seven Vietnamese counter-guerrilla troops from the U.S. army special forces camp near the mountain were also wounded.

Aluminum Chloride Solution Excellent Anti-Perspirant

By JOSEPH MOLNER, MD

Dear Dr. Molner: There is a solution containing aluminum chloride to prevent perspiration. What are the ingredients?—W.S.

It is a 10 to 25 per cent solution of aluminum chloride in water. Put the liquid onto the skin and let it dry. The stronger solution may be irritating. The weaker one will be less so and still be effective.

Dear Dr. Molner: My daughter, who is 39, craves water just about all the time. Why? This has been so for about three months.—L.L.

Among several possibilities are:

Diabetes mellitus (the usual form of diabetes) which would also result in sugar in the urine.

Diabetes insipidus, an entirely different disease despite the similarity of name, which does NOT cause sugar in the urine.

Psychological problems. Other conditions — which, however, would readily be noted: High fever, vomiting, diarrhea, swelling of tissues. Drugs. Sometimes drugs on the order of belladonna cause a dryness in the tissues and hence excessive thirst.

Dear Dr. Molner: My young son has rheumatic fever. I found out about it several months ago. His tonsils and adenoids have been removed since then. He is now on penicillin. Do you agree with this treatment?—L.L.

Yes, absolutely. This is the recognized treatment, and its good effect has been thoroughly proved. The penicillin may be given once a day, in tablet form, or injected once a month, using a larger dose in a form which will be absorbed gradually.

The purpose is, to prevent new attacks of rheumatic fever and the great risk of serious heart damage if such attacks do recur.

Note to Mrs. R.D.S.: While I don't recommend eating sugar as a habit (too many calories and bad for the teeth) there's nothing unusual about it. No different from eating candy!

Rhodesian Leader:

Independence Goal By End of Year

SALISBURY (Reuters) — Prime Minister Ian Smith said Thursday he hopes to get independence for Southern Rhodesia by the end of the year.

He told a press conference his minority white government has not yet considered how it would test the electorate's views on a unilateral declaration of independence if negotiations with Britain failed.

TIME LIMIT

Smith said there is a time limit to which these negotiations could go on "and we must bring them to a head as soon as possible."

Smith spoke at the 18-nation Commonwealth prime ministers' conference met in London with black African Commonwealth leaders pushing for discussions of a possible unilateral declaration of independence by Smith's government.

VOTE TO NEGROES

Southern Rhodesia is an internally self-governing British colony. Britain has in effect refused to grant Southern Rhodesia independence until the present government in Salisbury extends the vote to

Red Paper Says:

China Has Trouble With Minorities

PEKING (Reuters) — Anti-Communist "nationalist elements" have been rampant in many of Communist China's minority areas during the last few years, Liu Chun, vice-chairman of the nationalities affairs commission, said Thursday.

Writing in the Communist party's theoretical periodical, Red Flag, he said such elements were "under the influence of imperialists, foreign reactionaries and modern revisionists, as well as reactionary elements inside China."

They "try their best to provoke contradictions between nationalities, vainly attempt to split the unification of the motherland, and restore a system of exploitation and oppression."

He said their slogan is "anti-Han, independence and reforms."

Han is the name of the race which forms the vast majority of China's population. Minorities form only about six per cent of the population, but occupy about one-third of China's present territory.

Strom's the Greatest In Senate Scuffle

WASHINGTON (UPI) — It may have been the heat of the civil rights issue, the mugginess of Washington in July, or just plain masculine pride.

In any case, two 61-year-old senators took off their jackets Thursday and wrestled like schoolboys on the marble floor of the new Senate office building.

Sen. Strom Thurmond (D-S.C.), a physical culturist who started the day with 59 push-ups, was clearly the winner in what may become the biggest thing in exercise hereabouts since the 50-mile hike.

TEXAN LOST

The loser was Sen. Ralph Yarborough (D-Tex.), who hardly ever exercises and has a paunch and a 30-pound weight advantage to prove it.

The grunt-and-groan match lasted 10 minutes. It might have ended sooner except that Yarborough refused to cry "uncle!"

The rare spectacle of senators locked in physical combat took place outside the hearing room of the Senate commerce committee, whose members were waiting to approve Leroy Collins' nomination as director of the new community relations service of the civil rights law.

TURNCOAT

The committee voted for Collins, 16-1. Thurmond, who called the former Florida governor "a turncoat to the people of the south," opposed the nomination. When they emerged after the vote, both Thurmond and Yarborough, a civil rights supporter, were smiling.

"All in good spirit," said Thurmond.

"Just a friendly wrestling match," cracked Yarborough, "but it's still a slow way to get a quorum."

COME ON IN

The whole thing started when Yarborough met Thurmond outside the committee room before the meeting.

The Texan shook Thurmond's hand and, playfully pulling him toward the door, said: "Come on in, Strom." Thurmond had boycotted the session Wednesday, depriving the committee of a quorum of nine senators needed to vote.

Thurmond yanked Yarborough away from the door.

"I'll make an agreement with you, Ralph," he said. "If I can keep you out, you won't go in, and if you can drag me in, I'll stay there."

NO JOKE

Yarborough shrugged off the challenge as a joke, but Thurmond insisted.

The two men peeled off their jackets and handed them to a Thurmond aide along with pencils, pens, papers and Yarborough's spectacles.

The South Carolinian forced the Texan to the floor and held him down for several minutes. He let him up for some brief, shoulder-to-shoulder scuffling and then Thurmond again threw Yarborough to the floor. The Texan's head narrowly missed banging on the hard marble.

Yarborough stayed pinned for five minutes, occasionally struggling to free himself. Thurmond's aide whispered something about all this getting into the papers, but the red-faced South Carolinian kept advising Yarborough: "Tell me to release you, Ralph, and I will."

Up came Sen. Frank Lausche (D-Ohio), on his way into the meeting. Alarmed at the sight,

Wallace Tells Canadians:

Clean Up Your Own Yard

TORONTO (UPI) — Alabama Governor George Wallace warned Canadians Thursday that, before criticizing his state's racial policies, "you should clean up your own backyard."

Wallace, here to address the Lions International convention told a news conference, "before you attack us in Alabama, you should let the Indians off the reservations."

"When I was in British Columbia last January, I read where two or three Indian children were to 'integrate' a school out there," he said. "I object to this kind of hypocrisy."

"It's the kind of hypocrisy we get in the United States, especially in the press."

Wallace's visit has been loudly criticized by civil rights groups. Thursday night more than 1,000 pickets paraded around Maple Leaf Gardens during the official opening of the convention and around Wallace's hotel.

"I can't tell whether the demonstrations are against me or you," Wallace said. "All the signs I saw said things like 'Canada breeds racial equality.' 'If you have to have a moral crusade, all right, but you have enough to worry about up here without worrying about us.'"

Parents Appeal For Police Guard

McCOMB, Miss. (AP) — Explosions which injured two civil rights workers in McComb have touched off demands for protection of youths involved in civil rights work in Mississippi.

About 500 youths from other states are involved.

Forty-one parents of youths from Northern California decided to ask President Johnson, Governor Edmund G. Brown of California and their congressmen to assure protection for the young civil rights workers in Mississippi.

FBI ON CASE

The Federal Bureau of Investigation sent an explosives expert to McComb to help with the investigation. There have been two other similar explosions but no arrests.

An avowed opponent of the newly passed civil rights act was shot in the arm in Columbia, Tenn., Wednesday night.

Adoula in the Way Of Tshombe Cabinet

LEOPOLDVILLE (Reuters) — office with a cabinet already Carotaaker - Premier Cyrille Kasavubu.

Adoula apparently stood in the path of Moise Tshombe's succeeding him Thursday as he hesitated signing a presidential decree appointing Tshombe premier of the Congo.

Adoula was not available as Tshombe, former Katanga Province president, was poised to move into the premier's against this.

Diplomatic and political observers said the problem may revolve around the insistence by Adoula's party that a cabinet post be given to one of its women members.

Reliable sources said both Tshombe and Kasavubu were

Costly to Everyone

BOTH SIDES in the Alberni Valley Strike and the public generally must be grateful for the premier's successful intervention, using his persuasive authority as spokesman for the people of British Columbia, to break a deadlock that has been described as economically more disastrous to the Albernis than the earthquake-induced waves that previously dealt them such a blow.

Neither contender in the dispute can be counted completely the victor, nor could realistically hope to be. MacMillan, Bloedel and Powell River Ltd. has successfully resisted a union closed shop in its Alberni Valley offices, but with some modifications to the "Rand formula" to which it had earlier assented. The office workers' union, backed by about 4,000 striking fellow employees, has gained a considerable measure of union security, but fallen short of its goal of compelling full membership.

The losers, on the other hand, have been legion. To portray the strike of nearly two months as costing $15,000,000 hardly paints the whole picture, for as the tourist dollar is said to change hands half a dozen times to beneficial effect after its first expenditure, so undoubtedly do the wage dollar and the production dollar. Not only the families of strikers who have eaten into their savings and run up bills have lost, nor the company, but the merchants and their suppliers, the providers of services, even the taxpayers who must make up the income tax deficit on $15,000,000.

It is a moot point whether Mr. Bennett could have stepped in any earlier with similar effect and without claims of interference with the accepted rights of labor and of management, even if this were for the public good. One can grant that Mr. Bennett with the advice of the labor department would be the best judge of that; and the results indicate a good assessment.

It must nevertheless seem to many that there remains a flaw in the system of settling labor-management disagreement when a strike of such magnitude and such serious consequence can continue for more than seven weeks, and when in the end compromise is inevitable.

Farewell Review

VICE-ADMIRAL H. S. RAYNER is always assured of a hearty welcome in this city which knows him well and favorably, but there is special significance to his current farewell review of the RCN's Pacific Command. Consequent on the new alignments at defence headquarters his impending retirement means that he will be the last of the long roll of designated chiefs of naval staffs.

This adds to the normal piquancy of a visit by the professional head of the country's senior service, and especially so when the incumbent of this high responsibility is an officer widely esteemed and admired both within and without the navy in which he has forged a notable career spanning 36 years.

It is as a familiar of the Esquimalt station, of course, that Admiral Rayner will this weekend renew his intimacy with the officers and men of the Pacific coast, whom he will find in the fine state of efficiency that marked his own tenure as flag officer here, the appointment from which he left four years ago to assume the topmost post in the RCN. He is remembered in local circles also as a former commandant of the Royal Roads tri-service college.

These are links that tie him to this community and illustrate the qualities that ensured his steady upward progress in his country's service. He was a destroyer captain of vigorous pursuit during the war and successfully he filled with customary aptitude and acute mind the staff posts that lead to senior naval command.

Not only is Admiral Rayner an officer of unusual attainment in his professional capacities but he is an individual of engaging personal worth who wins loyalty as well as respect, and his retirement means that the navy and the nation loses a chief of staff whose counsel and advice has been of great value to the defence department.

There has been the hint that when he hauls down the admiral's flag that bespeaks his distinction he may take up residence with his family in Victoria, a circumstance that would bring pleasure to his many friends in this area and one whose possibility adds flavor to his farewell inspection of the Pacific Command.

Reaper Peepers

THE SOVIET UNION, Cuba and East Germany don't like U.S. government spy planes flying over them. And neither do American farmers.

Since early planting time this spring the U.S. Agriculture Department has had its own sky spies flying high over America ready with their cameras to catch farmers who grow too much wheat, beet, barley or tobacco.

This biggest aerial photography project in the world was initiated by the department to force the farmer to observe his officially allotted crop quota. Already more than 2,500,000 farmers have been checked on by cameras peering down on them from 14,000 feet up.

Despite the fact that the farmers are given ample warning of the flights, the sky cameras have uncovered quite a number of culprits—including one who was operating a moonshine whisky still.

Farmers who are discovered bending the law in this way—or others—are told to stop it or lose their federal price support.

We just can't help wondering how long it will take America's traditionally independent-minded farmers to either set up their own anti-aircraft defences or place the matter before the Senate Un-American Activities Committee.

Thinking Aloud

"... of shoes, and ships, and sealing wax."

By TOM TAYLOR

THE first man who said "I don't give a hoot-nanny" never dreamed, I'm sure, that he was coining a tag for the modern folk singers. All he really meant was that he didn't give a hoot—indeed as a slang dictionary opines, a damn—for anything.

I wouldn't go so far as to suggest that Hoot-nanny as purveyed on the small screen was geared to this philosophy but it's shading its offerings. The purity of folk music is succumbing to the "beat."

The informality of folk-singing, tempo sultry the mood instead of the other way round, is showing an Achilles heel. As TV reveals in the pattern is changing. When first I heard "Hoot-nanny" 'twas a welcome relief from the vocal pop-corn that grows as boring as it's noisy, some, but the gimmicks are creeping in.

Folk song per se has taken second place to putting the show over. They've even got comedians butting in. And the beat has won priority. Hoot-nanny is pleasantly more than a "yeah, yeah, yeah," still, but it's gauging its techniques to the feet and hands.

Of the listeners in the studio or the campus stadiums.

This is an old trick in the world of entertainment—audience participation. And a sure-fire winner. It's disarming, too. After you clap your hands in unison or stamp your feet you can't very well carp afterwards. You've become part of the show, and, obviously, if you've been having a good time, and you'd sit like a mummy otherwise, you are warm inside and have no mind to pick holes.

Only a curmudgeon in cold blood, like yours truly at the moment, would venture to dissent. Folk-singing is folk-singing even in a hoot-nanny, is it not?

And, after all, the whole idea of the thing is to sweep singers and listeners alike into an ecstasy of enthusiasm. So long as they don't squeal and faint, that is.

We can leave that to the Beatles.

Ed Sullivan prompts his audiences to join in by showering the performers with applause, although I often wonder why. They are frequently third-rate. But he's also putting his show over, and has no compunction about ordering the lookers-on to clap their hands while his lips are forming the word "wonderful."

With a straight face, too. And, of course, the audience can't then go home complaining if like sheep they've obeyed his commands. Only the TV watcher in the privacy of his observation tower can say to himself: "Ye gods!"

But this is show business, and the more you envelop the audience the better chance of success. Which is where the beat comes in.

The beat is insidious, tempting; it sets the blood tingling. And curmudgeon though he seems today yours truly falls easy victim too. And enjoys it.

I recently heard a local girl singing that irresistible "whole, wide world" and she also invited us to use our hands, but with warrant. She'd put half the Sullivan singers to shame. So it is, you see, that the beat has come to dominate the Hoot-nanny, this tribal time-rhythm that puts the pulse in tune. And this shouldn't be the whole tenor of folk singing, which in essence is as varied in pace and feeling as the lore it reflects in song.

But what right have I to kick? Doesn't the pibroch make my feet itch?

Answer to the Cynics

LAST Saturday the Colonist printed on its front page a significant report from London concerning the present conference of Commonwealth prime ministers.

It was written by Joseph MacSweeney of The Canadian Press, who happens to be one of the best Canadian journalists. In this dispatch Mr. MacSweeney pointed out that one British newspaper had been asking concerning the Commonwealth, "Is it a farce or has it a future?"

That question asked in Britain should make Canadians realize that they can no longer take the Commonwealth for granted and that they can do a great deal not only to keep it alive but also to strengthen it. In short, the time has come for us to realize the great importance of this organization to Canada and also to the world at large.

Consider the meeting which is now taking place. Grouped around the huge oval table in Marlborough House are the prime ministers or their deputies of 18 independent member-nations. One of them, Dr. Hastings Banda, represents Malawi, a nation born in Africa just this week and formerly known as Nyasaland.

Fourteen of these men come from countries which were British colonies at the end of the last war and have since been given their independence. These countries were under no compulsion to join the Commonwealth. They did so of their own free will and in each case were welcomed by unanimous agreement among those already belonging.

In the world of today such an association of nations has tremendous significance. Here is the finest example of countries of various colors, races and creeds working together—and what a wide-spread group they constitute!

Four from Asia, India with over half of the total Commonwealth population and already one of the most important nations in the world; Pakistan with the second largest population in the Commonwealth—and Ceylon and Malaysia.

From the awakening continent of Africa come seven, Nigeria, having more people than any other African country, and Ghana and Sierra Leone from West Africa. East African nations are newer but they number four—Tanganyika, Uganda, Kenya and now Malawi.

Two come from the Caribbean—Jamaica and Trinidad Tobago. From the Eastern Mediterranean comes a representative of Cyprus, although the future of this country seems uncertain to say the least.

The prime ministers from the four old members, Britain, Canada, Australia and New Zealand, complete the conference and on them rests the responsibility for success or failure.

Certainly there is nothing farcical about this grouping of 18 nations. True it is not a military alliance and never Church reformer John Calvin was born 455 years ago today. In 1509, His doctrine, Calvinism, asserts the dogma of predestination which says that God has chosen certain souls for salvation and others for damnation. The reformer was born at Noyen in France. Much of his later reform work was carried out in Geneva.

could be, if for no other reason than the fact that the members are so widely scattered. True also there are divergent viewpoints and customs. But the very fact that these nations form a club and obviously wish to keep it alive should be sufficient answer to the cynics.

What an opportunity this association gives for exchanging ideas, for developing an understanding of the whole world and for devising methods of co-operating for the benefit of the peoples of these 18 countries!

Much has already been done along this line. One good example is the Commonwealth Scholarship Plan which was initiated by my predecessor, Hon. Sidney Smith. Under it at all times 1,000 Commonwealth students are attending universities in a member nation other than their own. Canada provides for about one-quarter of the total number.

Under the Colombo Plan practically all of our aid goes to the four Asian members. In addition there are programs for the African and Caribbean nations. Volunteers under such plans as Canadian University Service Overseas (CUSO) go almost exclusively to Commonwealth countries.

One further step that could be taken would be to put all Commonwealth aid programs under one Commonwealth agency. This would help draw the member nations closer together and would make the programs more effective. Many other ways could be devised for furthering co-operation if there were the

Ottawa Offbeat

By RICHARD JACKSON
Colonist Ottawa Bureau

SO you think that this punch-drunk, accident-prone, trouble-starved minority Parliament is sick?

Well, it is. Four MPs have died in the last couple of months, and in at least two cases, worry and overwork were contributing factors. A half dozen are ill, two of them cabinet ministers. And you don't have to be a medical specialist to see the unmistakable stamp of grey-faced fatigue on a good many others.

What makes this minority Parliament, as was the previous one, so everlastingly irascible, so furiously frustrated?

Of course, as in the closing year when the Diefenbaker regime was collapsing, there is the uncertain situation, now made even more unstable by the further splintering of the splinter groups.

Social Credit splintered formally, splitting between the radical left of Reel Caouette and the far conservative right of Robert Thompson. And then, having divided, the Socred-Creditists, on votes in the Commons, like the New Democrats, further sub-divide. Nobody, least of all the three splinter group leaders, knows how the ranks are going to divide each time the government and the official Opposition come to a showdown in the Commons.

Then, too, there is that deep basic antipathy between Prime Minister Pearson and Conservative Leader Diefenbaker.

To say they detest each other is to understate it. Despite, perhaps, the more accurate word.

In Pearson's eyes, Diefenbaker is an intolerable ruffian, a political hoodlum. In Diefenbaker's estimation, Pearson is an unspeakable fop, a diplomatic sissy.

Then, perhaps in these recent uproarious weeks, the heat and humidity—temperatures soaring to the 90s and air as wringing wet as in a steam laundry—have been a factor, in at least building up fatigue.

Finally, though, it could be something that a freshmen MP, taking a wide-eyed, first-year look at the place, has put his finger on.

Bruce Mackasey, Liberal MP for Verdun, here little more than two years, got up the other day to tell the House this:

From the Scriptures

I will say to them which were not my people—They are my people; and they shall say, Thou art my God.

—Hosea, 2:23.

Redistribution

Artificial Argument

By SHAUN HERBON

THERE is an artificial air of consequence about the expressed anxieties of those who are attempting to generate public concern over the U.S. supreme court ruling on the redistribution of state electoral districts.

First, they say no climate of opinion existed in favor of redistribution. In fact, the issue has been under discussion and has been the subject of learned and political agitation for several years. It is an extravagant view which supposes that interest or agitation are absent because there are no riots or parades.

Second, they say there is nothing in the U.S. constitution which says, and there is no evidence that the Founding Fathers conceived of the idea of, one vote one man. And this is true but irrelevant. The Stuarts did not accept the abrogation of the divine right of kings, but this did not inhibit their own or subsequent parliaments. Feudalism did not diminish by consent. The Founding Fathers of the United States had no intention of founding a liberal democracy and their intentions are irrelevant to the present situation.

Third, they say, the supreme court may rule on such issues as civil rights but ought not to have injected itself into the question of political representation. This is a delightfully pompous, artificial and naive distinction based on the argument that because there has been no redistribution agitation on the scale of the civil rights campaign, the court could not justify its jurisdiction by an appeal to public necessity. The redistribution question is in fact an aspect of the civil rights issue, as even the most uninstructed must be aware.

There are two fundamentally similar and not hypothetical situations.

One is to be part of a Negro majority in a Mississippi county, and have no vote, against the white minority's illegal universal adult franchise.

The other is to have a vote in a six million voter district in California in which your vote is devalued to nothing, set against the adjoining district with 15,000 electors. This is a civil rights question, unless of course one assumes, as the supreme court did not, that "civil rights" concern only citizens of African origin.

There is something oddly unsophisticated about the reference back of this question to the minds of the drafters of the U.S. Constitution. It really is less than serious and is artificially contrived to justify a dissembling or an anguished judicial discussion which has no substance.

The supreme court ruling said it is "established that the fundamental principle of representative government in this country is one of equal representation for an equal number of people."

And this is a statement of fact. Until the agitation to force redistribution began some years ago, there were scarcely any Americans who, in the face of the electoral realities, did not suppose themselves to be equally represented. It is one of the most popular propaganda postures of those who speak about the nature of the free society and especially of political representation in the U.S.: one man one vote. It was simply taken for granted as one of the presuppositions of American political society.

The issue went to the supreme court on this basis: that an archaic situation existed which worked manifest injustice on a vast and increasing majority of the people. It went not as a political issue but as a question of justice, a violation of one of the basic assumptions of the American society.

It is argued nonetheless that the supreme court made a political, not a legal decision and by its ruling was illegally "making law." It is a strange point for either lawyers or informed commentators to make—as if case law were unfamiliar to them. Where there is legal provision for an adult franchise, the legal foundation exists for this decision of the highest court in the land.

There is also something innocent about the assumption that because interested political parties refuse to redistribute, the supreme court is usurping legislative power by forcing them to do so. The same charge was made by the conservatives after the first "controversial" civil rights decision and it has been made about every civil rights decision since.

With the Classics

Youth dreams a bliss on this side death, It dreams a rest, if not more deep. More grateful than this marble voice: It hears a voice within it tell: Calm's not lie's crown, though calm is well. 'Tis all perhaps which man requires, But 'tis not what our youth desires.

—Matthew Arnold.

Senator Goldwater

From The Gazette, Montreal

Wrong Definition

From The Gazette, Montreal

SENATOR Barry Goldwater don't accept that definition of the word "conservative." I think a conservative is a man who has something he wants to conserve and knows that he can only do it by being willing to innovate. I think a man who digs in with his heels against all change, who wants to set back the clock, isn't a conservative. I think he is a reactionary.

Mon like Governor Scranton, Governor Rockefeller, and Henry Cabot Lodge should not let Mr. Goldwater get away with his monopoly of the word "conservative." They should call him what he is—a reactionary.

Newest Theory Blames Sugar For Coronaries

By DR. ABRAHAM MARCUS, from London

Sugar, not animal fat, is the dietary cause of coronary heart disease—the sugar you put in your coffee or tea and eat in cakes, sweets, chocolates and ice cream.

Professor John Yudkin of the Department of Nutrition, University of London, announces this new theory in the current Lancet, Britain's leading medical journal. And he backs it up with evidence that has always been lacking for the fat theory. He has shown that a group of male patients who had recently suffered a coronary thrombosis habitually consumed more sugar than a group of healthy men of the same age.

For a group of men with arterial disease of the legs due to arteriosclerosis—furring and narrowing of the arteries as occurs also in the coronary arteries of the heart—he has shown a similar difference in sugar consumption compared with healthy men.

This is the first time that the diet of patients with these conditions has been shown to be different from that of normal people.

The fat theory is over 10 years old. It originated in the fact that mortality rates from coronary heart disease in different countries run parallel to national consumption of fat. Rich populations—Americans, British, Canadians—eat more fat, have a higher average level of blood fats, and suffer more coronary heart disease than poor populations.

Professor Yudkin suggests that the reasoning based on this chain of association is fallacious. Comparing the rich with the poor countries he demonstrates, as is already well-known, that the rich do eat considerably more calories, more protein and more fat than the poor—the richest eat four times more fat than the poorest.

But there is hardly any increase in the total consumption of carbohydrate. However, if the carbohydrate part of national diets is examined more closely it is found that while the proportion of starch has fallen considerably in the rich countries the amount of sugar has increased—an increase just as great as the increase in fat consumption.

The increase in sugar intake has been hidden by the constancy of total carbohydrate intake and this has misled dietary investigators for the past decade.

Therefore, as far as national consumption is concerned, both fat and sugar show the same order of increase and the same relationship to increased mortality from coronary heart disease.

Yudkin's study was simple. He took 20 men who had suffered a coronary attack in the previous three weeks, 25 men with arterial disease of the legs, and 25 healthy men—all 70 aged between 45 and 66 years. Sugar was measured as the amount taken in tea plus that consumed in easily identifiable foods containing a known quantity of sugar and which are bought and consumed in known amounts—e.g. cakes, sweets, chocolates, ice-cream, etc.

The coronary patients consumed an average 132 grams daily, the arterial disease group 141 grams, and the healthy control group 77 grams.

The difference between either of the first two groups and the third group is so great that it is almost impossible for it to have occurred by chance—the odds are 2,000 to 1 against for the coronary group, and over 30,000 to 1 for the arterial disease group.

The number of cups of tea drunk daily by the three groups averaged 8.1, 7.6 and 6.2, respectively, and the amount of sugar per cup was 12.3 grams, 11.3 grams and 7.6 grams.

It seems likely that the degree of arteriosclerosis, or furring and narrowing of arteries, is proportionate to the quantity of sugar eaten.

If this is so it means that the relationship between sugar and coronary heart disease is beginning to look like that between cigarettes and lung cancer—the more one consumes in each case the greater the risk of getting the associated disease.

It may be that those who eat over 110 grams of sugar daily, about four ounces, have a risk of getting a coronary five times or more greater than those eating less than 60 grams daily, about two ounces.

If the sugar theory gains support and if evidence accumulates to vindicate it, the consequences are likely to be very great. A practical means of preventing coronary heart disease and other disease due to arteriosclerosis or arteries may be at hand. It would be far easier for most people to give up sugar in coffee and tea than smoking—and there are cheap sugar substitutes to smooth the path of self-denial.

De Gaulle Has One Ambition Left

By
ALAIN de LYROT
From Paris

President Charles de Gaulle's "grand design" is to establish the Fifth Republic, founded by him, as a permanent institution which will give France stability for many years to come.

This is the basic reason why De Gaulle, sources close to him say, has decided to run for a second term in 1965.

Early in June, during his tour of Picardy, De Gaulle hinted in several speeches that he would run again and that he would make sure that the constitutional institutions he gave France in 1958 would remain after him.

De Gaulle, according to reliable sources, is obsessed by the fear that the Fifth Republic and his belief that authority and order are necessary in a democratic state, may not outlast him. He fears that once he is gone, France will return to the political instability of the Fourth Republic which preceded him.

De Gaulle's main preoccupation with the constitution of the Fifth Republic has been to establish the authority and continuity of the state while insuring democratic expression of the people's will. He feels that previous constitutions were either undemocratic or anarchistic.

The general, now 73, is reported to feel that the Fifth Republic has established the proper balance and that its constitution is workable, practical, modern and democratic. Its original draft and several reforms were approved by overwhelming majorities in France.

Its latest and most important reform, approved by referendum in 1962, called for the election of the president by universal suffrage instead of by the indirect vote of an electoral college such as elected De Gaulle in January, 1959.

Before he decides to retire De Gaulle wants to make sure that the Fifth Republic is firmly rooted. He now feels that he has the physical strength to run for another term although he reserves his decision to retire before the seven-year term is up.

After he is re-elected it is expected that he will call for another constitutional reform which will put the finishing touches on the constitution of the Fifth Republic.

The reform will call for the abolition of the present senate which he considers to be outmoded and have it replaced by a larger advisory body made up of local representatives of cities, towns and villages, as well as representatives of business and of labor. Full legislative powers would then be centred exclusively in the present National Assembly.

This would automatically abolish the speaker of the senate which is now constitutionally in direct line of succession in case of the death or resignation of the president.

Under present constitutional terms the speaker of the senate insures transitory succession for no more than 30 days during which he must call for presidential elections. Under the reform, the prime minister would succeed the president.

In practical terms the reform would mean that Gaston Monnerville, a leftist from French Guiana, present speaker of the Senate and one of De Gaulle's harshest enemies, would be removed from the political scene.

Monnerville would then be replaced by Prime Minister Georges Pompidou, one of De Gaulle's closest associates.

This means that, should De Gaulle retire in mid-term, Pompidou would then become president for the transitory period and be in a good position to run for president and be elected for a full seven-year term of his own.

While such a scheme amounts to a typical bit of Gaullist Machiavellianism, its basic purpose is to insure that Gaullism will succeed De Gaulle and that the institutions of the Fifth Republic will be preserved.

Churchill: A Final Honor

By LEWIS CHESTER, from London

Immaculate in parliamentary garb, black jacket, striped trousers, cigar, the Member for Woodford leaves his town house.

At his elbow his old friend, Viscount Montgomery of Alamein.

Before him—the familiar prospect of question time in the House of Commons.

For passers-by one of the last glimpses of Sir Winston Churchill going about his parliamentary business.

Later this month the Commons will bid its most distinguished member a formal goodbye. After exploring what has been described as all "the usual and unusual channels," the House has decided on an all-party motion placing on record its gratitude for Sir Winston's unique services to parliament and the nation.

A representative committee will then be appointed to present a tribute to Sir Winston at Hyde Park Gate, recalling the grand old man's 62 combative years in the Lower House.

It may well be Sir Winston's last big occasion at Hyde Park Gate. After the presentation he is expected to retire to his country house at Chartwell in Westham, Kent.

There seems to be no question of Hyde Park Gate being sold. It still serves a useful purpose as a London address not only for Sir Winston but for those handling the considerable volume of Churchilliana.

Although Sir Winston will be 90 in November, his close friends maintain that his constitution is still very strong.

He has, however, lost much of his old mobility. But his old friends still have theirs and intend to use it.

"Winston," said Lord Montgomery, "will feel the loss of the House of Commons very much—it is up to his friends to rally round in the evening of his splendid life."

Novel Arrangement

Striking Workers Stay on the Job

By LUBOR J. ZINK

Recently I came across an interesting innovation in labor-management relations.

It's a brand-new type of collective bargaining agreement which aims at eliminating the harmful effects of strikes on labor, industry and consumers without depriving workers of their ultimate weapon in wage and work-rule disputes.

The agreement was signed in Berne, Indiana, between a furniture corporation and the AFL-CIO Upholsterers' International Union. Its novelty rests in a unique provision for continuation of production during a strike or lockout.

To the traditional trade-union thinking this may sound like a lot of nonsense. According to the upholsterers' union officials, it makes good sense.

The idea apparently is that in the age of wars without actual fighting there can be strikes without actual walkouts.

To me the Berne agreement signifies that labor and management on this continent are at long last beginning to realize that the vastly changed economic and social conditions since Marx's days require a new approach to industrial disputes.

Here is how the "work-while-strike" idea is supposed to work. When an existing contract runs out without agreement on a new one, the union can call a strike or the management a lockout as has been the practice in the past. No one, however, ceases to work and production continues to roll out to the consumer.

From the moment the suspended strike or lockout is called, labor and management enter into a sort of peaceful co-existence struggle which the Berne agreement limits to 12 weeks. During this period powerful inducements for settlement come into operation.

For the first six weeks of the amicable cold war, 50 per cent of the workers' wages and an equal amount of company funds are placed in the hands of an independent trustee.

If the dispute is settled in that time, all funds are returned without penalty and the trustee—in the Berne case a local bank—donates his services free of charge.

Should the parties to the dispute fail to agree on a new contract at the end of the no-penalty period, they have another three weeks in which to settle and retrieve 75 per cent of the fund to which they continue paying their heavy contributions. The trustee charges only a nominal fee for book-keeping.

If settlement is deferred but still made within another two weeks (i.e., the 10th and 11th week of the strike-or lockout), both parties forfeit 50 per cent of the fund. Settlement in the 12th and last week costs the disputants 75 per cent of the accumulated money and a regular fee to the trustee.

After that either party can go back to the old-fashioned production tieup. In that case, however, the entire fund has to be donated to charitable purposes either directly or, failing an agreement on who the beneficiaries should be, through the local ministerial association.

Both the union and management which are pioneering the Berne pilot project of a new approach to industrial disputes are convinced that the cash incentive to come to terms within the first six weeks will prove virtually irresistible.

The ground rules also stipulate that all injury or illness insurance will continue to be paid during the 12-week period to the workers and not considered as wages, and that there will be no stoppage or slowdown of production and no suits or legal complaints of or by either side.

The whole idea strikes me as being eminently sensible and specifically tailored to North American non-doctrinaire economic and social conditions.

Why not give it a try in Canada which can ill afford the increasing emotional, material and even political destructiveness of old-fashioned strikes.

UNIQUE INVESTMENT PAYS BIG RETURNS TO MODERATE INVESTORS

Until recently, mortgage investment which for centuries has been regarded as the safest form of investment, was monopolized by banks, insurance companies, business corporations and by wealthy individuals. Most people could not afford it. Now, however, an investor, with only a moderate sum to invest can reap the non-speculative benefits which accrue from this form of investment.

The Trans-Canada Joint Mortgage Corporation is a subsidiary of Trans-Canada Mortgage Corp., the largest mortgage investment company of its kind in Western Canada. It has introduced a new type of mortgage investment which allows a person, with as little as $500 to invest, to become a joint beneficiary of a first mortgage. His name is registered as such in the Government Land Registry Office and he receives 7½% interest compounded semi-annually. Unlike stocks and bonds the returns from joint-mortgage investments never vary. If left to compound, they double in 8½ years, triple in 15. Or an investor may receive 7½% interest paid quarterly, leaving his investment intact at all times. Trans-Canada joint-mortgage investments are accepted as collateral security or may be withdrawn at any time.

A prospectus is available on request. For further information write or phone TRANS-CANADA JOINT MORTGAGE CORPORATION LTD., Bixby Bldg., Vancouver, B.C. (MU 5-4248).

Pope Suggests New Values For Labor Groups

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope Paul VI Thursday called for "a new humanism with spiritual values" in which unions might collaborate with employers and governments to build a planned society based on the common good.

The Pontiff made his forceful social appeal in a letter to French workers marking their 51st social week at Lyons. He outlined a position of church "apertismo" (openness) to state programming and the role of unions in developing national economic and welfare policy.

He praised unions as "the legitimate defenders of collective interests" but said they should not become rigid in attitudes of pure protest or mere opposition.

He also cautioned that in backing economic programming with support from labor, government should be careful not to pass from a society of "liberty without rules" to a society of "rules without liberty."

His sweeping comments fell in line with a letter last month to the Spanish social week, in which he called the 20th century "the era of socialization."

Attending the camp and doing the cooking were Scoutmasters Alec Lett, Hugh Doherty and Al Tombu.

PINCHBECK WEST, England (UPI) — Brian Cole, the farmer who threw 1,282 bottles into the North Sea in an effort to find a bride, said Thursday he struck out, but has 500 more bottles ready to go.

Cole, 33, said he got 381 replies from his first batch of bottles, most of them from Scandinavia.

He picked out the five most interesting ones, spent 11 days touring Scandinavia and came back to announce that blonde Inga-britt Granberg, 21, of Sweden was "Miss Right." Swedish newspapers published the story and Cole received an angry letter from Inga-Britt saying she had been questioned by Swedish reporters. "You must have been very talkative and I don't like this," the letter said. "You can sling another 500 bottles in the sea and maybe there is a girl you can marry — but not me."

Ever try "slow" gin?

(And we don't mean Sloe Gin.)

"Slow" gin and Sloe Gin sound the same. But they couldn't be more different. Sloe Gin, flavoured with sloes, is on the sweet side. Our "slow" gin—Burnett's Sterling—is very, very dry.

Why do we call it a "slow" gin? Because we make it slowly. Instead of being mass-produced in oceans—like most other gins on the market—Sterling is distilled in small, unhurried batches.

What sets the slow pace is our little English copper Pot Stills, which are more than 100 years old. By modern standards, they are miniatures—and slowpokes.

But as long as you like the way they make gin, we're in no hurry to change them. Look at the one on the left. We brought it here from England in the 1920's, when we imported Burnett's complete distillery. The men who mind our old Pot Stills know them as a good cook knows her seasoned pots and pans. They'd never forgive us if we decided to retire these old-timers. Switching to modern, monster stills would save us trouble, time and money. But our Sterling Gin would no longer be a "slow" gin. And you'd be quick to tell us that it didn't taste the same.

'Tool' of Used Car Ring Given Year's Jail Term

A youth described as a "tool" of a used car ring that was believed to operate across the United States border was sentenced in city magistrate's court Thursday to a year's imprisonment at a young offenders' unit.

Earl Douglas Marsh, 1410 Fairfield, pleaded guilty earlier to possessing a car stolen in Seattle and driving while his licence was under suspension.

He was given a four-month concurrent term on the second charge.

Marsh was caught when Const. Louis Pletz, of the Victoria city police noticed the front and rear licence plates of Marsh's car did not match.

Defence counsel David Hummel said that although he could not minimize the offence, Marsh was mentally a sick person, and Mr. Hummel asked that he be given psychiatric treatment during his jail term.

Magistrate William Ostler noted that a psychiatric report showed Marsh to be emotionally ill and in need of treatment.

In passing sentence, he recommended that Marsh spend at least the first portion of his term in the psychiatric wing of Oakalla Prison.

Three youths were fined $20 each when they pleaded guilty Thursday to separate offences of being minors in possession of alcohol.

They were James Morino, 882 Lampson; Ronald Vandehamk, 466 Burnside, and Ian Tateham, 734 Cameo.

Michael G. Cochrane, 3983 Holland, was fined $35 when he pleaded guilty to the same charge in Saanich court.

Although the earlier offence may seem minor, it involved a dangerous act," said Magistrate Ostler.

Minten and a friend had put several blockades on roads in Saanich in March in such a way that cars would be likely to crash into them.

"You have let down your probation officer, your family and, most of all, yourself," said Magistrate Ostler. "I don't know what you want out of life."

A man who bumped his car into a parked car June 3, then walked from the accident scene, was fined $100 in city court Thursday on a charge of leaving the scene of an accident. He was also fined $20 for driving without a valid licence.

Milan Godec, 1012 Richardson, told city police a friend, whose name he did not know, had been driving his car at the time of the accident.

Later he admitted he was the driver.

"When you start using a beer parlor as a social club it is time for you to realize that you have a drinking problem," Magistrate Ostler told a man in city court Thursday.

James C. McMillan, 3409 Bethune, had earlier pleaded guilty to a charge of impaired driving.

He was fined $350 but was allowed to keep his driver's licence for business purposes only for a period of four months.

With animals," he said, "you can never tell when a problem will arise."

Mr. Beeching said in recent years, a tranquillizer gun could have been used a number of times.

One case in particular occurred when a German shepherd dog turned on its master, sending a woman to hospital. No one could approach the dog, so it had to be shot.

In another case, police shot a cougar in Victoria; a tranquillizer gun would have taken away the danger of ricocheting bullets.

"With animals," he said, "you can never tell when a problem will arise."

Letters inquiring about prices have been sent to manufacturers by SPCA Secretary, manager David Beeching.

The action results in a series of events which culminated Tuesday, with the shooting of a bear in Saanich.

Though, in the case of the bear, we feel that the right course of action was taken," said Mr. Beeching.

The gun shoots a projectile—a form of big syringe loaded with a liquid tranquillizer, the amount depending on the weight of the animal. It renders it sleepy, and easier to handle.

Korean Stowaway Lost Off Freighter

A Korean stowaway was reported to have fallen or jumped from the Panamanian freighter Sarah near Victoria Wednesday night.

Shorthand the Answer

By IAN ARROL

I had heard he was a nut on shorthand.
"I'm a nut on shorthand," said chief court reporter Dennis C. Pearce when I first met him in the Law Courts Building.
Mr. Pearce's vision is of a world in which the written language as we know it would be done away with entirely.
He expanded on his views in an interview in his home at 1180 Hollis.

Spelling Aid

English in the early school grades would be essentially a course in shorthand. "You can't make a spelling error with shorthand."

"How we get children over the hurdle of the written language is almost beyond comprehension," he said.

The main trouble for students at university, Mr. Pearce said, is trying to take notes and not really hearing what the professor is saying.

In the early years of a child's schooling, a student is taught that the symbol "A" is sounded "ay," but is later taught it never in fact sounds so unless in some combination. "Our letters are not representative of that which they set out to represent."

"To produce the sound 'ay' there are no fewer than 17 different arrangements, of vowels and consonants, some examples of which are seen in such words as: pray, prey, weigh, convey, gave. The letter 'a' by itself when written or printed, capitalized or uncapitalized does not give the sound 'ay'."

Extending the example to include other letters which purport to be sounds, Mr. Pearce says we need altogether 360 combinations in order to spell correctly the 44 sounds of the English language.

One Sound

In shorthand one symbol represents a sound, and only that sound.

The whole of our English language can be represented by the arcs and strokes contained in a wheel with eight spokes—plus dots and dashes to represent the vowels.

Crusader

"Let's take the wheel and apply it to writing," declares Mr. Pearce.

Such would be a symbol of progress, for "with shorthand, we give the pen the speed of the lips. We write at the speed of sound, indeed the speed of thought."

Presses Liability

The court reporter says progress was made in the past, as our symbols for language became shorter through Hebrew, then Greek and then Roman symbology. "Unfortunately for man, the printing press solidified the Roman alphabet."

As one result, books which should be 20 pages long, if shorthand were used, are 200 pages long.

National Power

"Eventually, the ruler of the world will be the nation with the most efficient alphabet, not airplanes or rockets," says Mr. Pearce.

To further the cause of shorthand, Mr. Pearce is willing to speak to PTA groups, service clubs—any group which will listen to the message.

"No one has yet been able to refute my arguments," he concluded.

Premier Bennett indicated Thursday discussions are on between B.C. Hydro and United States utilities on the sale of Peace River power.

He was commenting on a U.S. proposal to build a $697,000,000 transmission system linking 11 states and the Pacific Northwest with California.

In Saskatchewan

CCF Autopsy Next Week

REGINA (CP) — The CCF party, in opposition after 20 years of uninterrupted rule in Saskatchewan, meets in annual convention next week to take stock of its April 22 defeat by the Liberals and to hammer out a platform in keeping with its new role.

Born in the economic doldrums of the drought and depression in 1933, the CCF won power in 1944 as a crusading, socialist regime. It pioneered a long list of social legislation, most famous of which was a compulsory medical care insurance scheme implemented in 1962.

In the prosperous and diverse sified economy of Saskatchewan in 1964, the party lacked a crusade in its bid for re-election. The Liberals won 33 seats, the CCF 25 and the Progressive Conservatives one in the 59-member legislature.

Former premier Woodrow Lloyd said he believes the defeat can be something of a blessing.

"In opposition we have a chance to sit back and reflect a little more," he said in an interview. "We're not so occupied with the plumbing of the government."

IT BEATS ME

By Jim Tang

COURTENAY — Dick Fouts is a professional football player and if anyone is critical or mildly horror-struck at his willingness to become a professional Canadian, the fault lies with the B.C. Lions. The current hulabaloo is an unnecessary situation which is doing no one any good, least of all the Lions and professional football.

Fouts, all-star defensive end last season and certainly one of the most impressive players the Lions have in training camp, can, if he wishes, take out his Canadian citizenship papers next week. He can also postpone the day which gives him the right to take a stand on the flag issue. In short, he has a financial ace in the hole and he knows it.

It may not, on the surface, appear to give citizenship much meaning to read that Fouts is willing to change his American status to that of Canadian for a better football contract. It is a matter which has already been brought up in Ottawa by an Ontario member of parliament and one which is bound to make a number of Canadians feel that a fellow who sets a commercial value on his citizenship may not be the kind of citizen Canada wants, or needs.

But that is a snap evaluation. This is no unusual situation and while it may be the first time it has come into the open in Canadian football, it is something happening every day in other professions and bringing more envy than criticism.

Canada has long been worried about the loss of brilliant college graduates who leave our country to get the most out of their earning power. Doctors, engineers and scientists born and educated in Canada leave by the score every year and eventually take out United States citizenship if they have the ability to make a good living there. Can anyone say that if Fouts does the same thing that his cast is different because he is a professional football player?

Fouts, who quite possibly intends to become a Canadian eventually in any event, feels that if he does it now to help make the Lions a better football club then it should also be worth something to him. He does not feel he is demanding a bribe to become a citizen.

"I am a professional football player, and as such am in fact just so much chattel to be bought and sold," he is quoted as saying. "I am, if you like, just a chunk of beef put on the block for the highest bidder. If I don't look after the price I'll bring, then who will?"

"As I see it, the simple fact of a change of citizenship is not the point. The point is that this is perhaps my last available area of negotiation."

Fouts makes some telling points. Professional athletes are bought and sold, often against their wishes, and their employment often doesn't depend so much on their ability as it does on the needs of a club. For most it is an insecure profession lasting only as long as youth. It would be less than natural not to take advantage of a situation in which a player has a bit more than his ability going for him at the bargaining counter.

Fouts says that the extra he is asking concerns "mostly my term of employment."

"I wouldn't like to go to Capozzi after next year, when my current contract expires, and negotiate as a Canadian. By that time my negotiation power would be gone."

His case differs from those of tackle Emery Barnes and end Jerry Jones, who returned to the Lions last season only because they had taken out their papers and could play as Canadians.

Fouts was a bona fide all-star last season. He looks every bit as good this season and probably can make it as an import for two or three more seasons and still be good enough to make it as a Canadian for a season or two after that. What he is asking, apparently, is assurance of a good salary as long as he can make the club as a Canadian.

General manager Herb Capozzi says he won't discuss any special inducement for becoming a Canadian immediately because it would set a "bad precedent" for Canadian football. He is backed up by coach Dave Skrien, who says that the depth of Canadian talent the Lions now have "doesn't make it urgent" to have Fouts playing as a Canadian.

With all due respect, one has to believe that Skrien's is a policy statement. Despite their good Canadian talent, the Lions couldn't help but help themselves if Fouts gives them the chance to keep one of the promising import players who will have to be cut when it comes time to name the 15 who stay.

Capozzi has a point about the "bad precedent"—but only because this is a case which has come out into the open and caused an impasse in which there has to be a loss of face or the loss of a chance to improve the Lions. It has to seem unnecessary. Unless Fouts' demands were unreasonable, his citizenship status should have been quietly settled when he signed his last contract—and it would have been quietly noted when he was counted into the Canadian population.

Now, no matter if Fouts does it on his own few are likely to believe he didn't get something extra. In the meantime, football is getting a perhaps justified knock despite the Lions' stated stand.

There can't be many who don't firmly believe that the many import stars—Jackie Parker, for instance—who have taken out their Canadian citizenship papers while still good enough to make their clubs as imports didn't get something extra in one form or another. This was taken for granted, without undue comment. Allowing this bawling of citizenship to get the publicity the Fouts case has can't help but get some people thinking wrongly about the game.

Phils Keep Lead Safe Orioles Win Twin Bill

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Clay Dalrymple drove in two runs with a homer and a single and all-star hero Johnny Callison threw out the potential tying run at the plate as the National League-leading Philadelphia Phillies edged Cincinnati Reds 4-3 Thursday night.

The victory kept the Phillies 1½ games in front of second-place San Francisco Giants who routed Chicago Cubs 9-4.

Dalrymple hit his homer with the bases empty in the second inning. His single capped the Phillies' three-run rally in the sixth inning. A pair of walks and three straight singles off John Tsitouris, all on the first pitch, accounted for the runs and a 4-2 lead.

Mr. Rynd said the minister should investigate to learn just what Fouts said.

"Usually, although a minister can comment on facts reported to the House by a member, it is not the responsibility of the minister to disclose what he is told and to say whether a newspaper report is correct," Mr. Tremblay replied.

Mr. Tremblay said he has read the Courtenay report. with two out in the second and gave up seven hits including pinch-hitter Len Gabrielson's non-homer in the fifth. Perry needed help from Bob Shaw in the ninth after yielding two more runs.

FAILS TO FINISH
Milwaukee Braves scored five runs on six straight first-inning hits and trounced Pittsburgh Pirates 11-6, but veteran southpaw Warren Spahn failed to finish for the 11th straight time. Spahn, 58, last went the route May 19 and has only three complete games in 18 starts for the Braves this season.

In the American League, the league-leading Baltimore Orioles swept a two-night doubleheader from Cleveland Indians, defeating the Indians 4-3 and Boog Powell slammed a pair of two-run homers and 2-1 on a ninth-inning homer by rookie Sam Bowens.

Bowens' seventh homer, with two out in the ninth, broke a 1-1 tie and handed Sam McDowell the loss in the second game.

Powell slammed his 22nd homer in the first after Luis Aparicio singled. He connected again in the fifth following Jack Brandt's single. Starter Dick Donovan was the victim both times.

CRAZY SINGLE
Joe Pepitone's bad-hop single with the bases loaded and two out in the eighth inning, snapped a 3-3 tie and triggered New York Yankees to a 6-5 victory over Washington Senators. With one out in the eighth, Claude Osteen walked Roger Maris and Mickey Mantle and gave Elston Howard an intentional pass, loading the bases.

Pepitone hit a sharp grounder to second that took a bad hop and kicked off Chuck Cottier's glove, two runs scoring. Cleve Boyer followed with a single, driving in what proved eventually to be the decisive run.

The victory went to Gaylord Perry, who replaced Sanford

OUTDOORS

with Alec Merriman

Qualicum coho fishing is now the best it has been in years, reports Murray Cree.

There is lots of feed in the area and good catches of coho have been recorded from right in the bay at Qualicum Beach through to Eaglecrest and French Creek. Red and white bucktail flies on the surface have been producing well. So have green and white bucktails on 18 to 24 inches of leader behind a flasher and two to four ounces of weight. Koho Killer spoons without flasher and Minnow-Teasers behind flasher have also been good combinations.

Pretty fair fishing is reported all the way from Northwest Bay to Deep Bay, with the odd spring reported, but mostly for coho up to about eight pounds.

Pitt Clayton reports a fair number of limit catches from Northwest Bay waters with the best areas off Gerald Island, off the spar buoy and off Mistaken Island. Strip-Teasers have been best producers, but Kamloops have also been good.

Long tides for this weekend don't really indicate hot fishing for anywhere.

Campbell River coho fishing is holding up well and the odd spring up to around 25 pounds is being taken by trollers.

And the most exciting fishing is still off the rickety old Argonaut wharf, casting with a one-ounce Krocodile spoon.

These are feeding fish and they haven't yet moved up into the tye pool, about 400 hundred yards up the spit. Trollers can't get at the hole where these big springs are feeding right beside and under the wharf. When a boat does try to get in against the wharf it is pelted with heavy spoons by the casters.

On Tuesday Frank Dingwall caught his 10th heavier than 20-pound spring from the wharf this season.

Cape Mudge, Big Rock, Butler Point, and Quathiaqui Cove have been best spots for coho, although the bite has been rather spotty.

Two salmon have started to arrive off Stuart Island at Yuculta Rapids and in Toba Inlet.

From Cowichan Bay comes reports of "tremendous" coho fishing for four to six-pounders by trolling with Strip-Teaser and flasher "anywhere in the Bay." Fishing has been best at the change of tide and middle of the Bay most productive.

Bill Rambold's 20-pounder off Skinner Point may herald arrival of the spring salmon run. Indians report some springs have already entered the river.

The Cowichan Bay Salmon Club's spring salmon ladder derby starts Sunday and runs to Aug. 15 with fishoff Aug. 23.

There will be weekly prizes of $10 and $5 and a $5 hidden weight prize and grand fishoff prizes for the first 50 anglers of $75 for first, $50 and $25, with two $10 hidden weight prizes.

The Cowichan Bay coho derby has been slated for Oct. 10, 11 and 12.

Yellow Point and Ladysmith waters have been providing fair coho fishing. East Point and Active Pass should become active about now.

This is the big weekend for the St. Joseph's Hospital first annual derby in Seanoich Inlet Sunday from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Entry tickets are $1, with proceeds going to the hospital building fund. Weigh-ins will be at Hall's Boathouse, Anchorage Boat Rentals and Holder's.

Deep Cove waters are still a good bet for coho and the Finlayson Arm end of the Inlet is continuing fairly good for big springs. Otherwise the Inlet has been quite spotty. Alf Loh's 21-2-pounder from Chesterfield Rock was biggest VSIAA fish last week.

Willis Point has been giving up some coho.

The odd spring salmon is still being taken from Oak Bay to Sooke, but fishing has been slow all along that waterfront. Becher Bay has even slackened off and with the extreme tides this weekend is not expected to improve, although there is still a chance of getting that big junker that could win the King Fisherman contest.

Now is the time to start watching for coho in those waters. There is plenty of feed.

On Wednesday we watched the killer whales cavorting off Otter Point, heading towards Victoria, and they could stir fishing up in southern waters.

On the fresh water scene almost all lakes are still good bets, especially the larger lakes like Butte, Upper Campbell, Lower Campbell, Sproat and Cowichan.

This weekend sees the lowest tides of the year.

Most of Duck Crop On Eastern Prairies

WINNIPEG (CP)—Bulk of the western waterfowl crop this year will be produced in Manitoba and in the eastern and northern parklands of Saskatchewan and northern Alberta, Ducks Unlimited (Canada) reports.

"Over-all production should be on a par with 1963 if present conditions continue and there is significant renesting of drought-displaced prairie birds," the private conservation group says in its July survey.

Water conditions are good in Manitoba and eastern Saskatchewan but rain would be helpful in northern areas if their full potential is to be realized.

The hatch of early-nesting species is good but prolonged in Manitoba and Saskatchewan parklands and good but late in the northern Alberta parklands. Some drought loss on the Saskatchewan central prairies is almost a certainty, however.

Army Snipers Good Second

BISLEY, England (CP-Reuters)—The British army edged out the Canadian army to win the United Service Challenge Cup inter-service shoot here Thursday.

The British regulars scored 1,329 points out of a possible 1,600. The Canadian eight scored 1,268 for second place.

The Canadians' performance was considered outstanding by shooting experts because in recent years they have finished well down the list. In 1963 they were next to last and in 1962 last.

Hornets Revamped Now Juvenile Club

Junior Canadian football in the Victoria area is dead, but by its demise the juvenile side of the game is getting a big transfusion.

Victoria Hornets, who operated as a junior team for the past four years, have entered the Vancouver Island juvenile league. Hornets' four years of junior play were a struggle to find suitable opposition. They played in the Fraser Valley league for a time, but finally had to withdraw. Last year they got exhibition games wherever they could.

With prospects no better for this season, the club executive decided to leave the 19-and-up junior age group and drop into the 16-18 juvenile classification where good competition is easily available.

Hornets will provide a much-needed fifth team in flourishing Island juvenile circuit which already includes entries from Oak Bay, James Bay Mustangs (last year's Vampires), Nanaimo and Campbell River. Nanaimo took league honors last season and went on to win the Little Grey Cup against Winnipeg.

With a new team in its first season, Hornets don't expect to drive the rest of the league into hiding. But they'll be building and gaining experience, as well as providing more boys with the opportunity to play football.

At a work-out Tuesday night they had more than 30 players including all of Jim Moody's championship bantam team of last year. Moody is acting as assistant coach of Hornets under boss Ken Stokes.

Greenwood Wins Three Net Titles

Carol Gibson, 17, and 15-year-old Mike Greenwood won the under-18 singles titles as play concluded yesterday in the Victoria Racquet Club junior tennis championships.

Miss Gibson took top spot by defeating Ruth Jorgensen, 6-2, 8-6, in a hard-hitting final which saw Miss Jorgensen serve harder and play well at the net, but make too many fundamental mistakes.

Greenwood won his event by downing John Seord, 9-7, 6-2, in a sparkling final featuring solid serving and some fine placements. Greenwood also took the under-16 singles with a 6-2, 8-6, victory over 14-year-old Chris Robbins, and wrapped up his third title as he partnered Brian Harvey in a 7-5, 6-2, under-16 doubles victory over Don Marnell and Seord.

Keith Burrell, 11, defeated 10-year-old Larry Strath 6-2, 6-1, in the under-12 singles. Keith partnered his brother Robin, 13, in the under-14 doubles, but the pair lost 6-0, 6-0, to Don Marnell and Chris Robbins. Robbins took the under-14 singles by default.

Pamela Craig beat Laura Blay 6-0, 6-4, in the girls' under-12 singles final.

And Sue Stephen won the under-16 singles with a close 7-5, 6-4, victory over 13-year-old Jean McIlree.

Defence Lawyer Arrested

JOHANNESBURG (Reuters)—Abraham Fischer, the lawyer who led the defence at the sabotage trial of South African nationalist leader Nelson Mandela and others, was arrested at his home here by security police Thursday.

Fischer, who is a banned person under the Suppression of Communism Act, was taken to security branch headquarters here.

JAILED FOR LIFE

Mandela, former leader of the banned African National Congress, was jailed for life with seven other men June 12 after being convicted of plotting the violent overthrow of South Africa's white regime.

Fischer recently visited Robben Island, where Mandela and the six other non-white prisoners are held.

The eighth prisoner, Dennis

Goldberg, who is white, is in jail in Pretoria.

Detectives sealed off the sixth floor of a building—regarded as the headquarters of Johannesburg's lawyers—where Fischer has his office.

They first refused to allow any other lawyers to enter their offices on that floor, but later relented. Two detectives stood guard outside Fischer's office, refusing admission to anyone.

It's Iris Time NOW

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

In my last column I mentioned the fact that July or early August is about the best time of the year to buy and plant new iris plants, and I listed some of the exciting new varieties and colors offered nowadays by specialist iris growers. I forgot to mention that the varieties listed can be bought for as little as a dollar each, give or take a few cents.

Midsummer is not only the best time to buy and plant irises—it is also the best time just after the flowering period to dig up, divide and replant any overgrown iris clumps in your garden. Irises can go about three years without attention, but there comes a time when the clumps are too big and congested, the soil exhausted, and the plants start going downhill unless these conditions are corrected.

Lift the roots carefully, easing them gently out of the ground with a digging fork. Clean them up a bit so you can see what you are doing—one way is to sit them on the lawn and turn the hose on them—then cut up the fleshy roots, called rhizomes, into smaller pieces.

Don't cut them TOO small, for pieces with only a single fan of leaves may take two or three years before they bloom. Allow two or three fans of leaves to each of the portions you select for replanting.

In very old clumps, it pays to discard the hard, woody portion in the middle, retaining the outside bits.

If the plants are going right back into the same piece of ground, it is a good idea to take advantage of the opportunity, while the site is vacant, to get in a few licks at improving the soil.

It should be dug over deeply, and if you have any very old rotted manure, by all means work this in. Some garden books advise against manure for irises, but if it is so well rotted as to resemble brown earth, it can do nothing but good.

If no manure is available, substitute peat moss and bag fertilizer, half a bucket of peat and a cupful of fertilizer per square yard. Any kind of fertilizer which will grow good potatoes will do for irises. Do NOT use a lawn fertilizer unless it happens to be one of the new Lawn Starter mixtures.

In planting, I like to make a hole a bit wider than it is long, and build up a ridge of soil in the bottom. The rhizome sits up on this ridge with the small bottom roots sleeping outward and downward. While filling in, I like to pour a little Transplantone or vitamin B-1 solution in the hole, finishing up with loose, dry soil on top. If root pests have been troublesome in the past, it is good insurance to dust the planting hole with five per cent chlordane dust first.

Watch your depth of planting, for this is one point on which many novices go wrong—they put in their iris plants much too deeply. While the small roots springing from the bottom of the rhizome can and should go well down, the fleshy rhizome itself should never have more than an inch of dirt covering its back, and some varieties bloom more freely when the top of the rhizome is actually exposed to the sun and air.

In arranging your root pieces in the bed, it is best to group them in clumps of three to five plants each, scattered here and there in the mixed bed. The sword-like foliage of the iris is rather formal and stylized, so any kind of formal or regular arrangement should be avoided. Keep the groupings as loosely informal as possible.

Last thing, get yourself a pair of scissors and give each plant a haircut, trimming the leaves back to half their original length. This reduces the strain on the roots while the plants are getting themselves settled down in their new home.

While it doesn't make any difference to the health of the plants, I think the shorn effect is less noticeable if you make your cluts in the form of an inverted V rather than straight across the fan of leaves.

Beatles, Beatles Everywhere

LONDON (NANA) — It is of course, the first film of the Beatle week in London, on stage. Beatles, A Hard Day's Night, on screen, in the newspapers. The Beatles' rivals keep saying Beatles as babies. A weekend they are on the downgrade, but date offer with the Beatles. They are still the No. 1 show life stories of the Beatles. And, the business attraction of England.

Hayley Mills, an adorable 18-year-old, was as big an attraction at the finals at Wimbledon as the players. She is wearing her hair short and she has lost some weight. Shirley Maclaine and Robert Mitchum have been a familiar sight together dining in the more popular places. Shirley is in London for her segment of the Yellow Rolls Royce. There seems to be a deal cooking for Marcella Mastroianni to play a cameo in Frank Sinatra's picture, Von Ryan's Express. Frankie disappointed the ticket holders for the concert he had planned to do in Europe, postponed to next year because of his film priority.

Success Fails To Swell Heads

LONDON (NANA) — Princess Margaret, her husband, the Earl of Snowdon, and several thousand fans inside and outside the London Pavilion theatre this week cheered and applauded the Beatles at the premiere of their first movie, A Hard Day's Night.

I was among those present, but I was more interested in finding out what the Beatles themselves thought.

- Here is what they have to say about their film:
- Beatle Paul McCartney: "We were not very good at the beginning of the picture, but we got better as we went along."
- Beatle John Lennon: "I think for a first try we were all right. We'll be better next time."
- Beatle Ringo Starr: "It was all so new for us. We learned as we went along."
- Beatle George Harrison: "We didn't expect it to be very much; but you've got to start somewhere."

I must add that producer Walter Shenson was ecstatic and plans his next movie with the Beatles in February.

From the remarks by the Beatles you can get a good idea of why they are so popular with the people who meet them and this includes me.

They are modest. They are cautious in assessing their talents.

For instance John Lennon told me, "We are definitely not as big now as we were last November."

The Beatles are unanimously happy in the great good fortune that has befallen them. All within 18 months.

"At the beginning," said their young manager, Brian Epstein, "they never thought all of this would happen to them. I expect them to go on for a long time. Something is always happening, like this film. When one thing finishes, something else will start."

A Hard Day's Night, which will be seen in North America next month, was filmed in eight weeks, and cost $750,000.

"We expect to get our money back in two weeks," said happy producer Walter Shenson. The Beatles are partners in the picture with United Artists. —SHEILAH GRAHAM.

Burly Robert Mitchum shoulders Shirley Maclaine

Warren Beatty will be starring in Moll Flanders with Kim Novak. She had wanted Richard Harris but he has too many other movies to make. An original plan had been to have Sean Connery and Diane Cilento. But they have too many other assignments. Especially Sean, who now receives $300,000 a picture. And all because of that suave, ruthless, enchanting James Bond character. So what happens to Warren's two-year lease on the pad in Malibu? One thing is sure, if he is in London, that is where Leslie Caron will be.

And talking of Leslie, the prospects are bright that her estranged husband, Peter Hall, will allow her to take their two children to Hollywood while she stars in The Favor with Rock Hudson. He clamped the court order against Leslie because of a newspaper article here in which it was stated that the small children simply adored Mr. Beatty. It naturally got his fur flying. But it is now smoothed down, according to what I hear. I hope so, because Leslie never had any intention of keeping the children in America.

Spotted at the White Elephant Eating Club on Curzon Street, that happy oil millionaire, Bob Neal, who told me, "I'm flying to California with an armful of Dior dresses." "What for?" I wanted to know. "Bait for girls," he replied. Has he reached the stage and age when he needs bait?

The Co-signer

By JACK SMITH

Every young man ought to be taught to handle money. I'm especially strong on this because I wasn't. There wasn't any money going around to practice with in my youth.

So when my older son finally got me to go in with him on some expensive photographic equipment I hit upon the idea of having him go to the bank and borrow the $200 himself.

"It will help establish his credit," I explained to my wife. "And making the monthly payments will give him some idea of how much money $200 really is."

He has a summer job, however, and works weekdays, so he couldn't get down to the bank to apply for the loan.

"All right," I told him, "I'll go down and get it started."

I went to the loan man in the bank.

"I want to apply for a loan for my son," I said.

His eyebrows went up. He smiled uncertainly.

"I mean," I explained, "my son wants to apply for a loan, but he isn't here. I mean, he's at work. I want to get things started."

Finally he got it straight. My son was going to be loaned $200 for photographic equipment. I of it.

"Uh, back before the war," I said. "I bought an ice box through you people. I'm afraid I was a little slow on the payments. You know, there was this war, and all that—"

He smiled. "I'm sure it's all right," he said.

So we got the loan after all. But now I'm not sure it's a signer.

Also, there's been a subtle change in our relationship. He doesn't think of me as his father any more. I'm his co-signer.

Dismissal Threatened Over Security Form

OTTAWA (CP) — A transport department employee at Vancouver-International Airport has been threatened with dismissal unless he fills out a security questionnaire on such things as his mother-in-law's birthdate, a British Columbia MP said Thursday.

Robert Prittie (NDP — Burnaby-Richmond) said the transport department is pressing the unidentified civil servant to give "basic information" about his in-laws and close relatives, listing dates of birth and death and place of origin.

Elaborating in an interview on a brief speech in the Commons, he said the civil servant does not have the requested information and has refused to fill out the "personal history form" as a matter of principle.

The employee took his case to the British Columbia Civil Liberties Association, which wrote a letter of protest to Transport Minister Pickersgill and referred the correspondence to Mr. Prittie.

Roy Baxter, personnel director for the department, replied to the B.C. association last month that the problem is purely an administrative one.

He said all federal civil servants holding sensitive jobs must fill out the personal history form soon after being hired as part of their security clearance.

Dr. James Foulkes, president of the civil liberties association in Vancouver, said the group is concerned that security procedures "do not get too far afield."

"We are wondering whether a man's reliability can be assessed on the basis of such things as his in-laws . . . our position is that you cannot evaluate a person's character by the character of others. It's the familiar question of guilty by association.

"Beyond this is the question of extending security procedures of this sort until it becomes a matter of judgment when to stop. There is proliferation. Law-enforcement people tend to say it is easier to play it safe.

"Civil liberties people usually say it is better to run some risk, to follow the principle of 'innocent until proved guilty' even if some guilty men go free."

Decision Reserved

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mr. Justice J. S. Aikins today will give his decision in an application by Standard Oil Company of B.C. to prohibit the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union (O.C.A.W.) from picketing a $20,000,000 company refinery in Burnaby.

Mr. Justice Aikins reserved decision Thursday night following a day-long Supreme Court hearing in which the company accused the union of being the force behind the appearance of mystery pickets at the plant.

The company, which has a non-strike contract with the union, seeks a restraining order against the union. It alleges that the union is actually on strike and that the strike is illegal.

New Home Recipe Reducing Plan

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drug store and ask for four ounces of Naran Concentrate. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoons full a day as needed and follow the Naran Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloated disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

'Touch of Democracy' Cloak, Dagger Under Hat

OTTAWA (UPI) — The government remained determined Thursday to keep under cover as much as possible its dealings with cloak and dagger specialists.

D. S. Macdonald, parliamentary secretary to Justice Minister Favreau continued to refuse to reveal contents of a special directive sent out to civil servants on security in the government.

The directive, inspired by Prime Minister Pearson, added a touch of democracy to the handling of security cases, Macdonald indicated.

However, he asked the opposition to take his word for this and refused to place it before parliament on the basis it would risk security.

Andrew Brewin (NDP-Greenwood) said the directive was available to all government departments but denied Parliament, G. W. Baldwin (PC-Peace River) suggested it be studied by a closed meeting of a parliamentary committee if it was too dangerous for public exposure.

Brewin said Parliament had the right and duty to protect the nearly 500,000 people who work for the civil service. Crown agencies and the armed forces—and who could have their careers snapped suddenly in a security case.

Publisher's Widow

McCurdy Funeral Set for Saturday

Funeral services will be held Saturday for the widow of a well-known newspaperman, Mrs. Lottie Kathleen McCurdy.

Mrs. McCurdy was born in Miami, Manitoba, 70 years ago. She was the wife of Wesley McCurdy, former publisher of the Winnipeg Tribune, who predeceased her in 1961.

In Winnipeg, she was a commissioner of the Girl Guides and a member of the St. Agnes Guild for the Children's Hospital.

She has been a resident of Victoria for 14 years and was a member of the Union Club and the Oak Bay Golf Club.

Fraser Aid Limited

Federal assistance to B.C. in damming the headwaters of the Fraser would be limited by law to 37½ per cent, 12½ per cent below the amount Premier Bennett has asked for. Resources Minister Laing told the Commons Thursday.

Mr. Laing said B.C. Lands Minister Williston had indicated the province would apply to Ottawa for help in a $4,900,000 plan to strengthen the Fraser River dikes.

TV-Film Talks Begin

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Actors and producers met Thursday for their first meeting in an attempt to avert a strike against producers of television entertainment films. No progress was announced.

The dispute deals with residual benefits—how much performers should be paid when shows are rerun. Any walkout would not affect this season's shows but could hamper new filming.

U.S. Queries Allies On New Soviet Plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States is sounding out its allies on the Soviet Union's plan for a United Nations peacekeeping force—a plan the Johnson administration finds unacceptable as it stands.

Officials said Thursday U.S. authorities have had informal exchanges of ideas with British and other western representatives. These have been inconclusive since none has yet taken a formal public position.

PROPAGANDA MOVE

Officials said, however, that the inclination of western diplomats is to consider the Soviet suggestion a tactical propaganda manoeuvre rather than a sincere effort to come to some firm agreement on this subject.

The state department continued to refrain from public reaction to the Soviet plan which would give the Security Council, with its big power of veto, absolute control over any UN force, its operations and financing.

Press officer Richard Phillips said American officials still had the four-page memorandum "under study."

Officials said privately the plan could not be agreed to in its present form since it provides no alternative method of action by a veto-free committee or the General Assembly if the Security Council is paralyzed by a Soviet or other big power veto.

When Study Complete, Says Admiral

Action on New Force Slated Soon

By DON GAIN

Decisions on Canada's new fighting machinery "should follow swiftly" after consideration of a joint study due for completion the end of this month, Vice-Admiral Herbert Rayner said yesterday.

The retiring chief of naval staff, here on a farewell visit, told a press conference at HMC Dockyard the study was being carried out by scientists and representatives of navy, army and air force.

"They are assessing the cost effectiveness of various anti-submarine ships, aircraft and submarines," he said.

Not Downgraded

Vice-Admiral Rayner said he did not think the navy was being downgraded in the establishment of a single service.

The navy has already had considerable experience with regard to integration, he said, and is in a good position to fit into the new organization.

"My position is that, the government having decided on integration, my job is to make the thing work," he said.

Had Ample Time

The admiral said the chiefs of staffs of the three services had ample time to make suggestions on the white paper on defence before it was written but he would not say what his stand was on the cancellation of the proposed all-purpose navy frigate program.

He hasn't decided what he is going to do after retirement. "I would like to say I am retiring to Victoria," he said, "but my plans haven't been made yet. However, I feel I still have some useful years left."

Probably Last

Vice-Admiral Rayner is retiring after 36 years in the navy and will probably be the last chief of naval staff.

Replacing the chiefs of staff of the three services is Air Chief Marshal Frank Miller, RCAF. Six other top-ranking officers have been named to the defence staff, three army, two air force and one navy. Five are yet to be named.

"The important thing is the calibre of these men," the admiral said.

Fully Integrated

"With regard to integration," he said, "the navy has already had considerable experience along this line."

"For some years now the operational units of the navy and the maritime squadrons of the RCAF on both coasts have been fully integrated and have come under the control and direction of fully RCN-RCAF integrated staffs."

"These integrated forces are assigned to the Canadian Maritime Command Pacific and the Canadian Maritime Command Atlantic. In view of this experience, and the fact that the navy is already organized along functional lines, the navy is in a good position to fit into the new organization as outlined in the white paper on defence."

Big Contribution

"I am sure that naval personnel will make a noteworthy contribution to the integrated armed forces of Canada."

"In these times of great and dazzling change, it is important to remind ourselves of certain constants. Among these are the importance of the sea and seapower to Canada and the free world. The more we produce and the larger our trade in world markets the greater our dependence on sea communications.

"Unquestionably the free and peaceful use of the sea is essential to Canada's progress and prosperity. We are dependent on the maritime forces of the free world, including our own, to ensure the continued freedom of the seas."

Admiral Rayner said he had received "very favorable" reports on the impression Canadian sailors had made on foreign ports during recent cruises. He also congratulated HMC Dockyard on the "very successful" refit of HMCS Grilse.

Yesterday, at the recently-opened new chiefs and petty officers' mess at former Moresby House on Esquimalt Road, Vice-Admiral Rayner planted a dogwood tree.

Following his three-day farewell tour of Pacific Command, the admiral will leave for Ottawa Sunday morning.

Others Determined

Candidate, 16 Leaving Race

BOSTON (AP)—Lewis Trout, 16, one of a group of teen-agers who announced they were running for public office, withdrew his candidacy for the governor's council Wednesday night.

Earlier in the day, State Secretary Kevin H. White talked with Trout and two other teenage politicians but announced he had had no success in trying to convince them that "the law is clear; they cannot serve."

The council is a group of eight elected officers, presided over by the lieutenant-governor, which passes on the governor's appointments and state contracts. This is a job done in most other states by the House.

Persons under 21 are not prohibited by state law from running for office.

White said he put all the candidates on notice that he would not issue election certificates to them in the event they won.

He based his ruling on a 1922 state supreme court decision which said "it is commonly understood that elections and electors alone are eligible" to hold office in the state.

Church Bid Approved

The Fairfield unit of Jehovah's Witnesses, which has twice made application to build a church, Little Kingdom Hall, on Joan Crescent east of Port Street, was successful on its third try.

The group has twice made application to build the church and twice been refused by city council despite the fact that, on both occasions, approval was recommended by the city's advisory planning commission.

Yesterday the matter was taken care of with little ceremony during a council meeting. "If we persist in this refusal," said Ald. Austin Curdie, "We may be facing an expensive lawsuit." He moved that it be granted.

Civil defence was necessary in the world today because it is not possible to wipe out human population with one exchange of nuclear arms, says John Erb, B.C.'s new civil defence co-ordinator. Mr. Erb, of 2183 Beach, feels "over-kill" is an exaggerated term. He was appointed to the post this week.

Mac-Powell Gets Steam Up

It's Back to Work

PORT ALBERNI—Steam once again is rising from the MacMillan, Bloedel and Powell River Ltd. plants here and thousands of workers are expected to report for work today, now that the seven-week-old office workers' strike has ended.

A company spokesman said last night that steam plant employees and maintenance men, and kraft plant employees, should report at 8 a.m. today.

Most of the other employees have been asked to get in touch with their supervisors to find out when they should check in for work.

Pipe fitters are asked to report for work, and pulp and paper office division workers are asked to report at the usual time today.

The plywood plant C shift started at 1 a.m. today, and A shift was to come in at 8 a.m. The workers on B shift were to be contacted.

Sproat Lake Division, Franklin Lake Division and Kennedy Lake Division will resume work

Monday, at the regular hours.

Somass sawmill and shingle mill will start work at 8 a.m. today; the Alberni Pacific sawmill division morning shift reports at 7:45 a.m., and the afternoon shift will start at 4:45 p.m.

Personnel in the planer mill are to be contacted.

Most workers went home for a good night's sleep last night;

there was no activity in the streets and no sign of any great celebration marking the end of the strike.

Premier Bennett, who intervened in the strike, said Thursday: "Premiers should not get mixed up in these things. It is only the second time in 12 years I have intervened in a strike. However, I'm very happy it was settled so quickly."

Jury Sworn Today In Traffic Death

COURTENAY—A coroner's jury will be sworn in Friday at 2 p.m. for an inquest into the traffic death of George Kistic, 66, of Cumberland who was involved in a two-car crash near Miracle Beach Wednesday.

Mr. Kistic died in St. Joseph's Hospital in Victoria Thursday.

He was rushed to Victoria from St. Joseph's Hospital Courtenay, Wednesday afternoon.

Courtenay Coroner T. A. Menzies said Thursday night an autopsy had been performed. He said a viewing would take place in Sutton's funeral parlor after the jury was sworn in. The inquest will then be adjourned until a witness is released from St. Joseph's Hospital in Courtenay.

The witness, John Hunjat, 63, of Cumberland, was a passenger in the Kistic car.

Sun's Out—And So Are the Kids!

Grim determination is shown by Glenda Simms, 9, 1018 Pembroke, as she takes swipe at tether ball.

After trying most of park facilities Maxine Harris, 9, of 2801 Cook, found she liked the good old fashioned slide.

One way of getting up in the world is practised by Brian Hunt, 7, 1328 Camosun, as he takes shaky step on stairs.

Leap frog was order of day for Fred Good, 8, 1274 Denman. Low nian is Richard Dabrowski, 11, 2516 Prior.

It's an upside down world for Murray Large, 11, 827 Princeton, as he tries luck on horizontal bar.

"Ah, that feels good," says Nina Sarakannas, 4, 2411 Quadra, as she wades in pool in brilliant sunshine.

Thursday's warm, pleasant sunshine brought out crowds of youngsters to enjoy facilities of city parks playground program. Roving in Central Park, photographer Jim Ryan found plenty to photograph as children tried their skill or just plain burned up energy.

'Little Butcharts'

Residents Fear Rowdyism

Fearing rowdyism, noise, dirt and traffic problems, residents in the neighborhood of the proposed "Little Butchart" development on the Spencer property made a strong protest to city council Thursday.

Their protests, as presented by Allan Baker, were enough to delay passage of the bylaw which would have rezoned the Spencer property from residential to commercial and leased adjacent city-owned property on Smith's Hill adjacent to the development company, Spencer Castle and Rock Gardens Ltd., for three months.

BACK TO COMMITTEE

The bylaw will go back into committee where it probably will be armed with further restrictions protecting adjoining property owners.

Appearing at the public hearing, which preceded the normal business of council, on behalf of the company, was lawyer Lloyd McKenzie, who said fears of the adjoining residents were bogies without meaning. They were fighting imaginary enemies which would never materialize. Mr. McKenzie said the provisions under which the city would lease the land would be well-fortified with rules which would make residents' fears groundless.

Mr. Baker said that the residents he represented did not oppose the idea in principle, but feared that the bylaw neither achieved council's purpose nor sufficiently protected adjacent property owners.

The bylaw specified, "commercial exhibits" but did not specify the type or age of building.

"CURIOUS" FEARED

Under the provisions of the bylaw, which encompassed the whole city, said Mr. Baker, he could envisage the erection of a new building with such "curious" (a bylaw word) as Japanese-made totem poles or perhaps, objects of artistic interest such as those collected by Harry Haigh.

Parking arrangements were a major irritant. There was nothing in the bylaw about traffic control and it was quite possible that owners of the 10 lots adjacent to the parking area would be subjected to the sort of rowdyism which takes place, it seems, wherever there is night parking in Victoria.

OTHER SORE POINTS

Lack of regulations about landscaping and signs were also sore points, said Mr. Baker. There was not even a provision for blackout on the parking lot.

Mr. Baker suggested an alternative site as a parking lot, on Arthur Street, immediately north of the Spencer property.

Questions by Mayor R. B. Wilson delineated the fact that it was not the general plan the residents were protesting but only the lack of restrictions.

In many cases, said Mr. McKenzie in rebuttal, Mr. Baker's clients' complaints seemed to be against the 20th century.

NO HARM DONE

They were opposed to cars, and the behavior of the young after dark. Oak Bay had put up with several night-operated public institutions for years with no harm done.

Parking would be in bays on the low contours of the land, said Mr. McKenzie. The lot would not be ugly nor would it be unsupervised.

Proprietors of the castle and gardens had no wish to disturb the tranquility of the neighborhood nor fight with their neighbors. They merely wished to throw the beautiful home and extraordinary gardens open to the public and to charge an admission fee.

TRIAL PERIOD

There would be a three-month lease to start with and that would be a time of trial. If there was cause for objection it could be dealt with at renewal of the lease.

It was decided that Mr. Baker, Mr. McKenzie, city solicitor T. P. O'Grady and city manager Dennis Young would get together and come up with a revised bylaw which would be considered by council committee. When it was smoothed out it would be placed before a special meeting of council for consideration.

1,000 See Films

More than 1,000 people attended Thursday's showing of the Victoria International Film Festival featuring five films on New Zealand.

To date, attendance has been about double that of last year. Next showing in the Cameron Memorial bandshell will be 8:30 p.m. Monday. Featured will be eight films on Canada.

Race Tonight

Sooke's Set For Big Day

All's set for Saturday's All-Sooke Day festivities.

Organizers have dug the 20-foot pool out at Sooke River Flats for the water sports, and there's a half-ton of spring salmon and a half-ton of meat ready for cooking.

10,000 EXPECTED

More than 10,000 people are expected to visit the area Saturday for the events which date back to early settlers' parties in 1928.

Visitors will see the biggest logging sports event staged in British Columbia—and enjoy the traditionally cooked food.

INDIAN STYLE

The salmon is cooked Sooke Indian style—boned, spread and cooked over long fires.

The meat, which will begin cooking from midnight tonight, is cut into 20-pound chunks, wrapped in burlap sackings, soaked in the Sooke River and placed in a pit of hot coals.

OFFICIAL START

The day officially begins when Esquimalt-Saanich MP George Chatterton opens the proceedings at 2 p.m. Saturday.

But the fun will have already started long before that. At 6:30 tonight begins the 24-mile marathon from Mayfair Shopping Centre to Sooke River Flats.

10 ENTRIES NOW

So far, there are 10 positive entries, including former Olympic Games marathoner, Jack Daniels, of Oklahoma City, but entries will be accepted right up to the start of the race.

At 7 p.m. there is the boys' 17-and-under two-mile road race at Sooke.

SATURDAY EVENTS

Saturday's events begin at 12:30 p.m. with the children's races. They include straight races, sack races, pie-eating race and will be followed by the women's novelty race, men's relay and men's half-mile.

Logging and water sports begin at 2:30 p.m. There will be log jousting, novice birling and championship birling.

Other events include: tree chopping with springboards, women's nail driving, men's

Chant to Speak

W. N. Chant, minister of public works, will address the Social Credit constituency meeting, Knights of Pythias Hall, 8 p.m., Monday.

10 Countries Named For Children's Village

The names of the 10 countries from which 40 children are expected to make up a Children's International Summer Village in Victoria next year have been announced by International Cooperation Year committee chairman Robert Dudley.

Application will be made through co-ordinating headquarters in Cincinnati to have children from India and Pakistan and from a group of nations which border the Pacific: Nationalist China, the Philippines, Japan, Columbia, Brazil, Costa Rica, Mexico and the U.S.

Each group of four children would be accompanied by an English-speaking counsellor.

Bandit Gets Eight Years

Court Lauds Police

By MIKE GADSBY

Saanich police came in for a commendation from Magistrate William Ostler Thursday after the final chapter was written in the April 24 armed holdup of a Saanich bank.

The commendation came just after Magistrate Ostler had sentenced Philip Arthur Carew to eight years imprisonment for his part in the holdup.

KEN CANTWELL

Seen in Passing

Ken Cantwell checking the passenger list. (He is passenger agent for Air Canada and lives at home, 2324 Weller Avenue, with his wife, Margaret, and their three children, Roslyn, 12, Robert, 8, and Susan, 6. His hobbies are woodworking and gardening) . . . Dudley Page, Pat Huus and George Lupo playing golf . . . Andy Lord waking up on his birthday and finding a goat tethered on his lawn addressed with birthday greetings to the squire of Mill Bay . . . Howard Rogerson looking over a land fill project . . . Donna Swanson shopping for a grueling early morning fishing trip . . . Bill Whitford heading for Sooke . . . Murray Morrison out job hunting . . . Bob McCulloch water skiing . . . Clayton Siddick urging everyone to take in the U-Tree Highlanders horse show on Millstream Road, Sunday.

different cloth than the others who were involved," he said. (Three other men, Jean Robitaille, Roland Dagenais and Clarence William Kraft, have all been sentenced to 10 years' imprisonment for their part in the holdup.)

GOOD POTENTIAL

"You are intelligent and have a good work potential, and you could be a good citizen."

In sentencing Carew to eight years' imprisonment, Magistrate Ostler noted that although the offence was of a most serious nature, Carew had no previous criminal record.

CAME IN LAITE

In sentencing Carew for his part in the $7,300 holdup of the Cook and Quadra branch of the Bank of Montreal, Magistrate Ostler noted that Carew had come into the plan "late, and without enthusiasm."

"You are certainly cut from the cloth of a criminal," he said. (Three other men, Jean Robitaille, Roland Dagenais and Clarence William Kraft, have all been sentenced to 10 years' imprisonment for their part in the holdup.)

MOST COSTLY WAY

Twenty years hence, said Ald. Curtis, people will laugh at the way we now settle our labor problems. Strikes certainly must be the most costly way possible of ironing out difficulties between labor and management. There were people on the sides of both labor and management who profited from these

Nickel Fare, More Runs Suggested for Hydro

Operate the buses on a five-cent basic fare and run them twice or three times as often. If they lose more money in three months of this year than they did in the same period in 1963 let Victoria make up the difference.

This was the suggestion advanced at city council meeting Thursday by Ald. Austin Curtis. The mayor and aldermen seemed a little stunned but agreed that the idea should be incorporated in the mass of information being gathered on the subject by the municipality.

INCOME CLIMBED

One railroad had drastically slashed fares—as much as 15 per cent—and found that its income increased 17 per cent because more people were being carried. Why not try this with buses? asked Ald. Curtis. Meanwhile, city council wants to know more about B.C. Hydro's proposed bus fare increase.

HEARING SET

A letter from the Public Utilities Commission informed council that a hearing will be held for the Vancouver area on July 27.

If the PUC does not hear by July 14 that Victoria agreed with the boost, it will proceed to set a hearing for Victoria.

NO INFORMATION

How can Victoria possibly agree or disagree when it has no figures on the question? aldermen asked.

City solicitor T. P. O'Grady agreed. It was the responsibility of B.C. Hydro, which was asking for the increase, to supply franchise holders with all of the facts, he said. This was the hydro authority's duty and such data should be in council's hands before July 14.

ABSOLUTE UNANIMITY

Reporting to council on a recent conference in Vancouver with Mayor William Rathie and other leaders of concerned municipalities, Mayor R. B. Wilson said there had been absolute unanimity against the boost.

It was agreed, said Mayor Wilson, that the cabinet should be approached on the matter.

City council agreed to allow any amount up to $5,000 as Victoria's share of this campaign, a campaign against higher fares. But, Mayor Wilson said, the cost could be as little as $500.

Child Molester Sought After Park Incident

A case of molesting, and an incident, both involving children in Victoria parks, were reported to city police Thursday.

A seven-year-old boy told his parents that his clothes had been taken off by a man while he was playing in Pemberton Park. The boy was upset but apparently unharmed.

An eight-year-old girl who was playing in Beacon Hill Park told her parents she was approached by a man who tried to become friendly but did not touch her. In both cases, police made an intensive search of the parks but were unable to locate anyone answering the descriptions given by the children.

Wanted: Real Labor Court

By A. H. MURPHY

Victoria city council may take the lead in urging machinery whereby costly strikes, such as the one which cost the Albernia area $15,000,000, would be settled in labor courts.

Council agreed to consider in committee a recommendation to the Union of British Columbia Municipalities, which meets in Burnaby in September, that courts be set up and major strikes be dealt with on a judicial basis. (See story, Page 19.)

MOST COSTLY WAY

Twenty years hence, said Ald. Curtis, people will laugh at the way we now settle our labor problems. Strikes certainly must be the most costly way possible of ironing out difficulties between labor and management. There were people on the sides of both labor and management who profited from these strikes and there must be some way to take the matter out of their hands.

The Port Alberni strike lasted 53 days and cost $15,000,000—a criminal waste of money and what it cost in privation and hardship no one would ever know, the alderman said.

Surely it was time that city council, as representing the people, took some action in the matter.

TIME RIFE

"The time is certainly ripe to take another and a hard look at this matter of labor disputes," said Ald. Millard Mooney. He was not opposing or running down organized labor, he said, but there had to be a less costly way of settling these things. He seconded Ald. Curtis' motion.

The matter of labor courts was considered by council several years ago. At that time it received aldermanic approval and was passed along to the UBCM convention.

The convention approved the idea and passed it along to the provincial cabinet, where it died.

Strike End Sought By Council Members

To avoid the doubtful distinction of having "one of the longest strikes in history," members of city council will try and settle the 14-month dispute at Albernia Meat Market, 1811 Cook Street, on month after month.

Manager of Albernia Meat Market Jack Williams said that anything council could do to settle the disagreement with Amalgamated Meat Cutters would be "only too welcome."

English Wedding

St. Michael's Church at Breinton, Herefordshire, Eng., was setting for the wedding of Carol Helen Heyd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Heyd, formerly of this city and now of Bristol, Eng., and Mr. Andrew Connell, son of Andrew Connell, Sr., Glasgow.

Flowers decorated the church for the ceremony at which Rev. Haynes officiated.

Dainty hand-embroidered rosebuds enhanced nylon overskirt of the white satin floor-length gown worn by the bride. The bodice was fashioned with scooped neckline and elbow-length sleeves. It dipped to a V at back from the natural waistline and extended into a chapel length train. A satin rose headpiece held the shoulder-length veil. Deep peach roses, stephanotis and lily of the valley were in the bouquet.

The bride was given in marriage by her father.

Only attendant, Mrs. D. Charlwood, chose a street-length gown of midnight blue brocade. Veiling en tone misted from a gold satin head bow. Gold satin shoes and bouquet of yellow roses and lily of the valley completed her ensemble.

Mr. Christopher W. Greene, Ireland, was best man. Guests were ushered by Mr. David Knights, Hereford, England, and Mr. Derek Lamb, Edinburgh, Scotland.

Mr. Jack Dobson proposed the toast at a reception in "The Cottage of Content." Connell tartan decorated a two-tier cake on the bride's table.

For travelling on honeymoon in England and Scotland, the bride wore a wool boucle Chanel suit of peacock blue with blouse en tone.

Joyce Edwards Wed at Duncan

Duncan United Church was the setting for the double-ring ceremony uniting in marriage Joyce Edwards, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Edwards of Duncan, and Mr. John Edward Haller, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Haller, 851 Lampson Street.

Rev. Bernard Knipe officiated at the pretty summer evening wedding. Mr. Nick Robertson sang Because and the Lord's Prayer during the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father the bride was lovely in a princess-line gown of white brocade fashioned in traditional style with button-up sleeves and back and scoop neck. Her shoulder-length veil fell from a crown of pearls. She carried clover-like loops of stephanotis and greenery centred with pink gardenias.

The two bridesmaids chose semi-sheaths and organza jackets all in aqua color. Their headpieces were aqua flowers circling pill-boxes and circular veils. Maid of honor Miss Doreen Kidd, chose silk shantung, in the same shade. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Lynn Robertson and Miss Linda Byers of Vancouver.

Best man was Mr. Ted Upward and ushers were Mr. Reg. Chasson and Mr. Mel Edwards.

At the reception toast to the bride was given by Mr. Ted Wilks. After a luncheon guests danced to the music of Alf Carter's band.

For a honeymoon to be spent at Banff, the bride changed into a pink Italian knit suit with pastel accessories, and ivory earrings, gift of the groom.

On their return Mr. and Mrs. Haller will make their home at Cedar, B.C.

Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. C. Chasson of Nanaimo; Mr. Gary Vigers and Mr. and Mrs. T. McKernan of Port Alberni and Miss Judi Bird, Janet Hogg and Mr. and Mrs. Doole of Vancouver.

Bride-Elect Honored

Malenfant, Mrs. C. Fleck, Mrs. K. Freisinger, Mrs. A. Fischer, the Misses Rita Scherr, Marilyn Scherr and Mary Malenfant.

Divines Water, Too

EXETER, England (CP)—Jeweller Walter Kent, 63, has started a new line of business—a consultant for expectant mothers. Kent claims he can tell the sex of an unborn baby by swinging a pendant on a gold chain on the woman's neck. "I can tell the sex by the way the chain rotates. It's similar to water divining, which I can do also."

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I went with Virgil for four years. We were both out of college when we met so you know we were not kids. Virgil told me he could not get married for awhile because the shock might kill his mother. I was pretty upset over this but when I met his mother I could see she was difficult and decided to co-operate.

Last Christmas I told Virgil either to give me an engagement ring or we were through. He reluctantly gave me a nice opal in a white gold mounting. I'm sure it's not my imagination, Ann, but during the last several weeks Virgil has been trying to get the ring away from me. He keeps offering to have it cleaned, etc.

Last night while Virgil and I were watching TV I fell asleep. When I woke up my ring was gone. I turned the sofa inside out and upside down but I couldn't find it anywhere.

I know very well Virgil slipped that ring off my finger and I'd like to know what to do about it.—DIZZGUSTED.

Dear Dizz: Take the hint, Kiddo, and turn the guy loose. Virgil doesn't want to be engaged to you, so face up to facts and don't let him waste any more of your time.

Dear Ann Landers: "Am I wrong to be upset? The other afternoon our bridge club met and the eight of us yakked about all sorts of things—as usual. It was an especially lively gab-session. None of us is an expert bridge player and we do a lot more laughing and talking than we do card playing.

Just as we were leaving the hostess said, "Would you girls like to hear what you sound like?" She then led us to the tape recorder which she had hidden behind the sofa. The machine had recorded everything that had been said in those two hours.

She played the beginning of the tape back to us and I wanted to drop through the floor. On the way home three of the girls said they thought it was a dirty trick for her to record our conversation without our knowledge. I am furious. May we have your opinion?—A.B.D.

Dear A.B.D.—It was indeed a dirty trick. If you decide not to return to the woman's house you would be perfectly justified.

Dear Ann Landers: Recently someone asked how you spotted the phony letters. Well, even though you think you are smarter than everybody in the whole world put together I'd like you to know that you make plenty of mistakes.

I wrote to you about a very serious problem two months ago. It had to do with a neighbor's dog. I've been watching the paper every day since I wrote to you but my letter has not been printed. So you see you can't spot the phonies after all.—VANCOUVER

Dear Van: I receive over 25,000 letters a month. An amazingly small percentage of these letters are phonies. I can print only 21 letters a week, so if a letter doesn't make the newspaper it doesn't mean I passed it up because I didn't believe it was on the level.

Anyone who wants a personal reply in the mail can get one by sending me a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Better than that I can't do, Bub.

CONFIDENTIAL TO PROOF AGAINST YOU: Sorry, but what you experienced was not love at first sight. It was a chemical reaction. After you became better acquainted you learned that he was truly a fine person. This couldn't have been determined at a glance, however, learning about people takes time.

Victoria Poet Moving To Toronto Position

Victoria poet Phyllis Webb has moved to Toronto where she has taken a position as program organizer in the public affairs department of the CBC.

She recently returned to B.C. after study of contemporary poetry in Toronto, Montreal, New York and San Francisco, made possible by a $2,000 Canada Council grant.

WAS LECTURER

Previous to her trip she lectured in English at UBC for three years. In 1957 she was awarded a Canadian government overseas award to work on her poetry in Paris.

She shared publication of her work with two other poets, Eli

Phyllis Webb

Mandel and Gael Turnbull, in the volume Trio in 1953.

FIRST BOOK

Her first book of poetry was published in 1956 under the title of Even Your Right Eye. The second book, The Sea is Also a Garden, followed in 1962.

Miss Webb is currently being heard over CBC radio Friday nights in a series of seven talks entitled What Summer Says.

STORIED CAVES

The Hell Fire Caves, near West Wycombe, England, was where the eminent group of Britishers met 200 years ago and formed the notorious Hell Fire Club.

Here Kitty

Not quite sure of how tame this tame bobcat is, Monica Bauer, 8, appears a bit timid as she tries a "Here, kitty, kitty." Cat is one of two donated to Rudy's Zoo by Walt Disney studios recently as a reciprocal gift for timber wolves lent by Rudy Bauer, 10, to Disney for use in an animal feature film some years ago. Cats were still a little nervous after trip to Victoria and had a tendency to scratch.—(Jim Ryan)

She Still Rules Waves —That Includes Airwaves

LONDON (AP)—Screaming Lord Sutch's days as a pirate broadcaster may be numbered. Earl Jellicoe, minister for the Royal Navy, told the House of Lords Wednesday the Union Jack will be restored to the offshore anti-aircraft fort from which the pop singer has been broadcasting for two months in defiance of the BBC's monopoly.

"What is the government going to do about it?" demanded Lord Hobson.

Earl Jellicoe explained:

"The difficulty is this: The fort lies about half a mile outside territorial waters, and this naturally inhibits legal action."

BAY CLOSING

The government, however, will adopt "bay closing lines" in accordance with the Geneva convention on territorial waters, thereby bringing the entire Thames Estuary and the island, called Shivering Sands within British jurisdiction.

New Goods Scrapped

War Surplus Dumping Cost Millions

OTTAWA (CP)—Parliament's financial watchdog, Auditor-General A. M. Henderson, has uncovered multi-million dollar losses on the sale of surplus military equipment.

He reported Thursday to the Commons public accounts committee that the Crown Assets Disposal Corporation collected $715,106 on sales of surplus army, navy and air force equipment originally valued at $28,966,581.

NEW SCRAP

President Louis Richard of the government's disposal corporation said much of the equipment had to be sold for scrap—even though it was brand new.

He said equipment made or designed for military use often had little or no commercial value.

Mr. Henderson said that since 1957, the armed forces have declared an average of $26,500,000 worth of equipment surplus each year.

He suggested the defence department—and all other government departments that turn over equipment, supplies, buildings or land to the Crown Assets Disposal Corporation for sale—should be required to make a public disclosure of the original cost and the final sale price in all such deals.

Much of the equipment sold in the fiscal year ended March 31, 1963, was bought during the Second World War, such as spare parts for vehicles and planes.

Mr. Henderson said that equipment originally bought for $13,500,000 was rated as new or unused when put up for sale.

Changes in operational requirements led to scrapping $21,200,000 worth of the military equipment.

SPARE PARTS

The commodities included $9,300,000 worth of aircraft spare parts, $8,800,000 worth of electronic spare parts, $2,800,000 worth of harbor defence equipment, $2,400,000 worth of vehicle spare parts.

In addition there were nuts, bolts and screws worth $162,000, and air cameras, parts and equipment, worth $77,200.

Aircraft Crash Probed

QUEBEC CITY (UPI)—Investigators moved into the rugged wilds of northern Quebec Thursday to probe a private plane crash that killed three New Jersey sportsmen.

At the same time, efforts were made to transport the bodies of the three men to their homes.

The bodies were found early Thursday by Canadian Air Force pararescue men, six days after the single-engine Beechcraft Musketeer carrying the trio crashed on the way home from a fishing trip.

The dead have been identified as Dr. Charles H. Taylor, 47, of Butler; Hollis Card, 55, of Butler; and Floyd Struble, 55, of West Milford.

Little League Winners

Winners of a raffle to raise funds for equipment to be used by Little League teams in Layritz Park were: 1, Jacqueline Norbury, 4255 Springridge; 2, G. E. Knight, 501 Kelvin; 3, Linda Mahaffy, 1176 Dunster-ville; 4, Peter Pollon, 1060 Yates; 5, Susan Wilson, 703 Haynes.

Meeting

Valley of the Swans, a sound-color film, will be shown at a meeting of the Lions Club of Victoria, Empress Hotel, 12 noon today.

Minister Denies Wiretapping Claim

OTTAWA (CP)—Justice Minister Favreau denied Thursday that the RCMP in the Toronto area installed wiretapping devices.

He was replying to David Orlikow (NDP—Winnipeg North) who asked about Toronto reports of wiretapping by the RCMP and proposed that Commons' time be made available to debate the question.

Mr. Favreau said he would consider the proposal.

Mr. Orlikow noted that a private member's bill on the Commons' order paper proposes to deal with the subject.

Mr. Favreau told New Democratic Leader T. C. Douglas that he saw the reports of RCMP wiretapping, communicated with his officials and, as a result, was denying the charge that the RCMP employed wiretapping.

Toronto Strike

Paper Late, Greeted By Scuffles

TORONTO (UPI) — The Toronto Globe and Mail, one of three city newspapers hit by a typographers' strike Thursday, produced a thin single edition this morning and loaded it aboard trucks for delivery amid scenes of minor violence and bitter inter-union feeling.

La Presse Talks Off Indefinitely

MONTREAL (CP) — Mediation proceedings have been postponed indefinitely between Montreal's largest paper, La Presse, and striking members of the International Typographical Union (ITU).
When the typographers went on strike they said one of the main issues was automation in printing plants.

All Eating

Surplus: 2,134 Toads

LONDON (AP) — The British Family Planning Association announced Thursday it would like to dispose of 2,134 toads.
The toads, all shy, retiring females, came from South Africa and are of a variety known as xeno plus laevis. They have skins of a pleasant grey-green, are four inches long, weigh five ounces each and never utter a sound. It takes one small piece of liver a week to feed them.

The association began importing xenopus laevis by the hundreds years ago for use in pregnancy tests. For this purpose the amiable little amphibians worked fine.
Recently British researchers came up with a chemical pregnancy test which in one swoop made xenopus laevis obsolete.

The chemical test works just as well as the toad test, and the chemical gets along nicely with no liver ration.

The problem, then, was what to do with 2,134 toads still killing around eating 2,134 portions of liver every week. A plea for help went out from R. C. Elstone, a retired brigadier-general who is general secretary of the association.

"This," he said, "is one of the toughest assignments I have ever been faced with and that includes 40 years in the British army. We urgently desire to divest ourselves of these toads but we can't, for instance, have brigades of small boys coming down after them in buckets, now can we?"

British MPs Have Own Work

Canada's a Bother

LONDON (Reuters) — Harold Wilson, leader of the opposition Labor Party, told the House of Commons Thursday it should not have to use its time legislating on Canadian matters.
The House is due to discuss next

Wednesday a bill dealing with Canada's proposed contributory pension plan.
Conservative MP Ronald Bell replied some members did not share Wilson's views and would be sorry to see a change in the existing procedure.

Has Barry Bagged It?

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Senator Barry Goldwater Thursday apparently sewed up a first-ballot nomination as the Republican presidential nominee when the key Ohio delegation was released from its favorite-son commitment.

The action by the pivotal Buckeye state delegation assured the Arizona Senator of at least 40 additional delegates when the convention roll is called next Wednesday, and possibly all of the state's 58.

According to the UPI tabulation, that would mean a first-ballot strength for Goldwater of at least 735 votes with 655 needed to nominate.

It appeared that only a political miracle could derail Goldwater's bandwagon—and none appeared in sight.

It was a jolting blow to Pennsylvania Governor William Scranton who had hoped that Ohio would remain firm to its favorite son commitment to Governor James Rhodes at least through the first ballot.

DELEGATES RELEASED
But Rhodes announced only a few hours after arriving on the convention scene that he was releasing the delegates to vote their convictions.

Goldwater had roared into this teeming convention city Thursday with a flat declaration that he was "more confident than I have ever been that I will win" the presidential nomination on the first ballot.

The Pennsylvania governor said he was shocked to read a news report on the interview saying that Goldwater, if president, would tell the joint chiefs of staff that a decision had been made to win in Vietnam and "now the problem is yours."

Scranton said the nation's president is not the same as a chairman of the board, one who can let others decide when nuclear weapons should be used.

The Viet Nam comment attributed to Goldwater, Scranton said, was similar to other statements by the Arizona senator about control of nuclear weapons.

In his demand that the full transcript of the interview be supplied to the platform committee when Goldwater appears today, Scranton said: "We are no longer dealing in a game of simple Republican politics. Now we are talking about the welfare of nearly 200 million Americans."

BOSS BACKS 'BRINK' TALK

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite sharp Senate charges of "brinkmanship," Defence Secretary Robert S. McNamara backed two top U.S. military leaders who said the United States is prepared to risk war with Communist China to preserve South Viet Nam's independence.

McNamara told the Senate foreign relations committee at a closed session June 23 that the U.S. effort to save South Viet Nam "carries the risk of escalating to military actions outside the border of South Viet Nam."

DEFENDS STATEMENTS
In his testimony, released Thursday, McNamara defended statements made in separate interviews by Admiral Harry D. Felt, outgoing commander-in-chief of U.S. forces in the Pacific, and Gen. Paul D. Harkins, retiring commander of the American advisory and training mission to South Viet Nam.

McNamara was questioned sharply about the interviews by both Democrats and Republicans.

Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper, ranking Republican member of the committee, demanded to know "who speaks for American policy?"

BRINKMANSHIP
"They say something this committee has not been told is official American policy," Hickenlooper said.

"Isn't that a form of brinkmanship that they are playing?" asked chairman J. W. Fulbright (Dem. Ark.). "They don't wish to say that we won't fight under any circumstances and they don't want the president to pledge this."

SEEKING DETERRENT
McNamara told the committee that the U.S. is seeking to develop "a sufficiently strong military posture to deter our opponents from either political or military aggression, and through that deterrence to avoid a breakdown of the peace."

McNamara said no responsible military or civilian official in the defence department has spoken on a foreign policy matter without specific approval from the highest ranks of the U.S. government.

STOPPED SHORT
But he stopped short of saying that President Johnson had authorized Felt or Harkins to speak out on risking war with Communist China.

"I simply want to say that Admiral Felt's statement was in conformity with the established policy of our government," McNamara said.

McNamara said the U.S. objective is clear—to maintain the independence of South Viet Nam.

The Viet Nam comment attributed to Goldwater, Scranton said, was similar to other statements by the Arizona senator about control of nuclear weapons.

In his demand that the full transcript of the interview be supplied to the platform committee when Goldwater appears today, Scranton said:

"We are no longer dealing in a game of simple Republican politics. Now we are talking about the welfare of nearly 200 million Americans."

U.S. Determined

Asian Crisis Seen If Chinese Bluff

OTTAWA (UPI) — External Affairs Minister Martin said Thursday that the southeast Asia conflict could reach crisis proportions if Communist China underestimates the determination of the United States.

Martin, briefing members of the external affairs committee on the international situation, said he did not feel that further conferences, suggested by the Communist Chinese, would provide an answer to the problems in the area. He added, however, that China, as a member of the International Truce Supervisory Commission in Laos, would participate in any conference that was called.

He said the situation was dangerous "because the challenge is from an adversary which has become so isolated from the west that it cannot be counted on accurately to assess United States' purpose and determination." He said the U.S. government has clearly stated that "it seeks no selfish advantage in Viet Nam—no territory and no bases."

OWN FUTURE
"It seeks only the consolidation of a government free from outside attack and at liberty to determine its own future," Martin declared. "If Hanoi and Peking do not accept this objective as a legitimate one, the risk is that they may, in pursuing their own expansionist aims, provoke a dangerous confrontation."

New Tough Policy Drafted by China

LONDON (UPI) — Communist China's top leadership has laid down a new "tough" strategy against Moscow and the United States in a series of meetings with provincial political chiefs, party and army representatives, diplomatic despatches from behind the Bamboo Curtain said Thursday.

Peking's party and state leaders, including Mao Tse-tung; his heir apparent, Liu Shao-chi; Premier Chou En-lai, and army and provincial chiefs, were said to have taken the new hard line decisions in consultations which began about June 26 and lasted several days.

At the same time Peking denounced the United States as the "prime enemy" of the world's peoples and as the "most ferocious aggressor."

Diefenbaker Wants 'Confederation' Parley

Let's Find Old Formula for Unity

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Diefenbaker called Thursday for a pre-Confederation type of conference to find a way to keep Canadians together in Confederation in the future.

He told the Commons the conference should be attended by representatives of federal and provincial governments and all political parties in Canada. The delegates should meet behind closed doors away from the glare of publicity "to arrive at decisions regarding the future of this nation."

The Opposition leader made his proposal in a speech on a government resolution, preparatory to introduction of a bill to implement the federal-provincial agreements reached at the fiscal conferences last November and at Easter.

NDP Leader Douglas said Mr. Diefenbaker's suggestion for a conference to study the future of Confederation was useful. It might end the constant haggling which now threatened Confederation.

Mr. Diefenbaker said he does not look at Canada as a series of sovereign states "one of one Canada" with equal partner-

IT BEATS ME

By Jim Tang

COURTENAY — Dick Fouts is a professional football player and if anyone is critical or mildly horror-struck at his willingness to become a professional Canadian, the fault lies with the B.C. Lions. The current hula-balo is an unnecessary situation which is doing no one any good, least of all the Lions and professional football.

Fouts, all-star defensive end last season and certainly one of the most impressive players the Lions have in training camp, can, if he wishes, take out his Canadian citizenship papers next week. He can also postpone the day which gives him the right to take a stand on the flag issue. In short, he has a financial ace in the hole and he knows it.

It may not, on the surface, appear to give citizenship much meaning to read that Fouts is willing to change his American status to that of Canadian for a better football contract. It is a matter which has already been brought up in Ottawa by an Ontario member of parliament and one which is bound to make a number of Canadians feel that a fellow who sets a commercial value on his citizenship may not be the kind of citizen Canada wants, or needs.

But that is a snap evaluation. This is no unusual situation and while it may be the first time it has come into the open in Canadian football, it is something happening every day in other professions and bringing more envy than criticism.

Canada has long been worried about the loss of brilliant college graduates who leave our country to get the most out of their earning power. Doctors, engineers and scientists born and educated in Canada leave by the score every year and eventually take out United States citizenship if they have the ability to make a good living there. Can anyone say that if Fouts does the same thing that his cast is different because he is a professional football player?

Fouts, who quite possibly intends to become a Canadian eventually in any event, feels that if he does it now to help make the Lions a better football club then it should also be worth something to him. He does not feel he is demanding a bribe to become a citizen.

"I am a professional football player, and as such am in fact just so much chattel to be bought and sold," he is quoted as saying. "I am, if you like, just a chunk of beef put on the block for the highest bidder. If I don't look after the price I'll bring, then who will?"

"As I see it, the simple fact of a change of citizenship is not the point. The point is that this is perhaps my last available area of negotiation."

Fouts makes some telling points. Professional athletes are bought and sold, often against their wishes, and their employment often doesn't depend so much on their ability as it does on the needs of a club. For most it is an insecure profession lasting only as long as youth. It would be less than natural not to take advantage of a situation in which a player has a bit more than his ability going for him at the bargaining counter.

Fouts says that the extra he is asking concerns "mostly his term of employment."

"I wouldn't like to go to Capozzi after next year, when my current contract expires, and negotiate as a Canadian. By that time my negotiation power would be gone."

His case differs from those of tackle Emery Barnes and Jerry James, who returned to the Lions last season only because they had taken out their papers and could play as Canadians.

Fouts was a bona fide all-star last season. He looks every bit as good this season and probably can make it as an import for two or three more seasons and still be good enough to make it as a Canadian for a season or two after that. What he is asking, apparently, is assurance of a good salary as long as he can make the club as a Canadian.

General manager Herb Capozzi says he won't discuss any special inducement for becoming a Canadian immediately because it would set a "bad precedent" for Canadian football. He is backed up by coach Dave Skien, who says that the depth of Canadian talent the Lions now have "doesn't make it urgent" to have Fouts playing as a Canadian.

With all due respect, one has to believe that Skien's is a policy statement. Despite their good Canadian talent, the Lions couldn't help but help themselves if Fouts gives them the chance to keep one of the promising import players who will have to be cut when it comes time to name the 15 who stay.

Capozzi has a point about the "bad precedent"—but only because this is a case which has come out into the open and caused an impasse in which there has to be a loss of face or the loss of a chance to improve the Lions.

It has to seem unnecessary. Unless Fouts' demands were unreasonable, his citizenship status should have been quietly settled when he signed his last contract—and it would have been quietly noted when he was counted into the Canadian population.

Now, no matter if Fouts does it on his own few are likely to believe he didn't get something extra. In the meantime, football is getting a perhaps justified knock despite the Lions' stated stand.

There can't be many who don't firmly believe that the many import stars—Jackie Parker, for instance—who have taken out their Canadian citizenship papers while still good enough to make their clubs as imports didn't get something extra in one form or another. This was taken for granted, without undue comment. Allowing this bartering of citizenship to get the publicity the Fouts case has can't help but get some people thinking wrongly about the game.

Phils Keep Lead Safe Orioles Win Twin Bill

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Clay Dalrymple drove in two runs with a homer and a single and all-star hero Johnny Callison threw out the potential tying run at the plate as the National League-leading Philadelphia Phillies edged Cincinnati Reds 4-3 Thursday night.

The victory kept the Phillies 1½ games in front of second-place San Francisco Giants who routed Chicago Cubs 9-4.

Dalrymple hit his homer with the bases empty in the second inning. His single capped the Phillies' three-run rally in the sixth inning. A pair of walks and three straight singles off John Tsitouris, all on the first pitch, accounted for the runs and a 4-2 lead.

Minister Silent On Fouts Case

OTTAWA (CP) — Citizenship Minister Rene Tremblay said Thursday he does not intend to single out defensive end Dick Fouts of the British Columbia Lions for admonition on the basis of a newspaper report.

Mr. Tremblay was referring in the Commons to a Courtenay, B.C., report stating that Fouts would apply for Canadian citizenship if the Vancouver football club makes it financially worthwhile.

SHOULD BE TOLD
P. B. Rynard (PC—Simcoe East) said in the House Wednesday that Fouts should be told that citizenship is not granted simply to improve his bargaining position with the Lions.

A native of Salt Lake City, Utah, Fouts becomes eligible to apply for citizenship July 14. By Fouts becoming a Canadian, Lions would be eligible to use another American football import.

READ REPORT
Mr. Tremblay said he has read the Courtenay report. But "I do not feel that it would be appropriate for me to single out this particular applicant for citizenship for admonition only on the basis of the newspaper report, which may be an oversimplification or an abbreviation of his comment on his feelings towards Canadian citizenship."

Any applicant must have an adequate knowledge of the responsibilities and privileges of citizenship and intend to live in Canada permanently.

ALL CONGRATULATED
"If Mr. Fouts can satisfy these requirements, I know that we would all wish to offer him the congratulations which we accord to other applicants in the same circumstances."

Mr. Rynard said the minister should investigate to learn just what Fouts said.

"Usually, although a minister can comment on facts reported to the House by a member, it is not the responsibility of the minister to disclose what he is told and to say whether a newspaper report is correct," Mr. Tremblay replied.

The Giants spiced a 16-hit attack with homers by Willie Mays and Willie McCovey to wallop the Cubs.

Although the Giants chased Chicago's 11-game winner Larry Jackson, their own starter, Jack Sanford, had to quit in the second inning with a numbed right arm.

The victory went to Gaylord Perry, who replaced Sanford

Milwaukee Braves scored five runs on six straight first-inning hits and trounced Pittsburgh Pirates 11-6, but veteran southpaw Warren Spahn failed to finish for the 11th straight time. Spahn, 6-8, last went the route May 19 and has only three complete games in 18 starts for the Braves this season.

In the American League, the league-leading Baltimore Orioles swept a two-night double-header from Cleveland Indians, defeating the Indians 4-3 as Boog Powell slammed a pair of two-run homers and 2-1 on a ninth-inning homer by rookie Sam Bowens.

Bowens' seventh homer, with two out in the ninth, broke a 1-1 tie and handed Sam McDowell the loss in the second game.

Powell slammed his 22nd homer in the first after Luis Aparicio singled. He connected again in the fifth following Jack Brandt's single. Starter Dick Donovan was the victim both times.

CRAZY SINGLE

Joe Pepitone's bad-hop single with the bases loaded and two out in the eighth inning, snapped a 3-3 tie and triggered New York Yankees to a 6-5 victory over Washington Senators. With one out in the eighth, Claude Osteen walked Roger Maris and Mickey Mantle and gave Elston Howard an intentional pass, loading the bases.

Pepitone hit a sharp grounder to second that took a bad hop and kicked off Chuck Cottier's glove, two runs scoring. Clete Boyer followed with a single, driving in what proved eventually to be the decisive run.

WINS 12TH GAME
Detroit's Dave Wickersham survived two homers by Lee Thomas and became the first American League pitcher to win 12 games as the Tigers edged Boston Red Sox 4-3.

Bob Allison and Don Mincher hit consecutive home runs in the sixth inning, powering Minnesota to a 2-1 triumph over Kansas City Athletics. The Athletics' Jose Santiago, making his first major-league start, scattered

Tony Lema Beats Gale Scores 68

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (AP) — Tony Lema, posting one of history's great rounds over the St. Andrews Old Course, which he saw for the first time on Monday, scored a four-under-par 68 Thursday for the halfway lead in the British Open golf championship.

The California pro had a 36-hole total of 141, two strokes better than long-hitting Harry Weetman of Britain.

STRONG WIND
Lema, winner of three U.S. tournaments last month and on his first trip to Britain, included an eagle 2 in his round, fashioned in North Sea gales that almost blew strong men down for the second straight day.

With the wind at his back, Lema pounded his drive at the 312-yard 12th hole on the green and sank a 25-foot putt for an eagle.

THREE BIRDIES
Lema had three birdies — at the sixth, ninth and 14th holes. It was the first round under 70 since the tournament started.

One of the day's best scores was turned in by Malcolm Gregson, 20-year-old British pro, who shot a two-under-par 70. But with his 78 Wednesday his total stood at 148.

LOOKED GOOD
Weetman added a 71 to an opening 72 for a 143 that looked as if it would stand up for the halfway lead, until Lema, starting toward the end of the pack, turned it on.

Bruce Devlin of Australia, the former plumber's assistant, shot his second straight 72 for 144, matching Christy O'Connor of Ireland, 71-73-144.

NICKLAUS 74
Big Jack Nicklaus of Ohio, who has won every major golf title but this one, had trouble on the huge St. Andrews greens and finished with 74. It left him at 150, nine strokes behind Lema.

The field was trimmed to the low 45 scorers for Friday's final 36 holes, with 153 the cut-off point.

Five of the eight Americans in the field made it. In addition to Lema and Nicklaus, Doug Ford and Doug Sanders had 151 and Phil Rodgers, who lost in a playoff last year, had 153.

Defending champion Bob Charles of New Zealand, the left hander, pulled his game together with a 71 after an opening 79 and got in with 150.

Gary Player of South Africa, the 1959 champion, also came back with a 71 and had 149. Jean Garaisalde of France, who shared the opening-round lead with O'Connor with 71, had a 74 for 145.

Then came Max Faulkner, the last British winner of the title, in 1951, and Jimmy Martin of Ireland, with 146. Faulkner had his second 73 and Martin a 72 Thursday.

Tennis Rebels Freed

MELBOURNE (UPI) — The Lawn Tennis Association of Australia today lifted its ban on Wimbledon champion Roy Emerson and runner-up Fred Stolle, making them eligible to compete for Australia in this year's Davis Cup tennis matches.

In an announcement that caught members of the LTAA by surprise, president Norman Strange said that non-playing Davis Cup captain Harry Hopman had already included Emerson on the Aussie team. He said Hopman "included Emerson's name early this week as a precaution."

The announcement reversed a decision by the New South Wales Lawn Tennis Association, made earlier in the day, to reject a motion to reinstate Emerson, Stolle, Ken Fletcher and Martin Mulligan.

The four "rebels" had been banned from playing on the Australian team this year because they left home before the LTAA's March 31 structure against competing in tournaments abroad.

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — New Westminster took back the leadership of the Inter-City Lacrosse League Thursday night with a smooth 19-10 victory over Nanaimo.

Paul Parnell led the scoring parade for the winners with five goals and Cliff Sepka, Bill Wilkes and Wayne Shuttleworth each picked up three goals. Ron Flaton and Ron Lotous scored two apiece and Dave Story a single.

For Nanaimo it was Bill Russell with three, Terry Davis with two, and Ted Liebhich, Howie Ellis, John Dorslinger, Murray Thomas and Craig MacRae with singles.

Goalender Les Norman backed up the New Westminster play-making in the second half by kicking out 22 of 24 Nanaimo shots, and over the game blocked a total of 43 drives. Terry Shires substituted in Nanaimo nets for Alf Shuker and turned away 32 shots.

The last-place visitors fell apart in the third quarter, repeating the pattern of their last two games at Queen's Park Arena, and it cost them seven goals.

They had entered the half trailing only 9-8, but the ramp-age quickly put them out of contention.

Five Generations

Not Like Old Days

Granny Donovan Still Travelling

ALBERNI—Mrs. Nora Donovan, whose first trip to Canada was behind a yoke of oxen, came to Alberni last week by bus from California in 30 hours.

Her excursion with her family in the ox-wagon from North Dakota to a Manitoba homestead took 30 days back in 1911. Mrs. Donovan, who now has 50 living descendants, met her six-months-old great-grandson Kenny when she arrived here for a visit at the home of her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Mike Donovan, 235 Elizabeth Street.

BAKED IN WAGON

Mike recalls that his mother baked bread in a stove in the back of the wagon as the oxen plodded northward to their homestead north of Winnipeg. Eleven years later, the whole family except Mike migrated again to Minnesota and he became the only Canadian among the Donovans.

Mrs. Nora Donovan, a widow for some years, is 90 years old, alert, with good hearing and excellent eyesight, but slower on her feet than she was in the days when they rattled over the prairies to the Manitoba hinterland.

NUMEROUS RELATIVES

She travelled from Wilmington, Calif., with her daughter, Mrs. Agnes Creighton, and within a day or two had begun to recognize by name the numerous great-grandchildren here, many of them born since her last visit eight years ago. The Alberni branch of the family, 35 strong, including in-laws, gathered last Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Anderson where the granddaughters served dinner.

STONY BROOK, N.Y.—H. V. Kaltenborn, dean of news commentators, reached his 86th birthday Thursday without a single word of advice for the younger generation. "I've never believed much in giving advice," he said in an interview at his Long Island estate.

Redding Rites Held

PORT ALBERNI—Funeral services were held Wednesday for Mrs. Katherine Hope Redding, longtime resident of this district who died in Victoria Sunday.

Mrs. Redding was the widow of a man who served as a sergeant in the Riel Rebellion. Joseph Thomas Redding died in 1943.

Born in Manchester, Eng., 89 years ago, Mrs. Redding came to Canada as a child and had lived in B.C. for 74 years. She is survived by a son, William, California; three daughters, Mrs. L. E. Wilson, Australia; Mrs. H. E. Murray and Mrs. J. W. Harris, in the Alberni Valley; a sister, Mrs. J. Crockett, Courtenay; 10 grandchildren and 21 great-grandchildren.

Rev. John Frith officiated at the funeral. Burial was in the family plot, Greenwood Cemetery.

Around The Island

Young Driver Jailed

COURTENAY — A local youth, Wayne Thomas Emery-Clayton, was sentenced to four months in Oakalla for failing to remain at the scene of an accident. On a second charge of impaired driving he was fined $100 and lost his licence for six months. In default of the fine, he was sentenced to 30 days to run.

Transfer

Comox Base Busy

COMOX — RCAF Station Comox is buzzing with activity as the RCAF Search and Rescue Unit is transferred here from Vancouver. More than 50 officers and airmen of the unit have arrived at the station here during the past 10 days, as an advance party of the nearly 200 personnel who are being transferred from Vancouver.

AIRCRAFT ARRIVE

Three Dakota aircraft arrived here Monday, and a dozen assorted jets, conventional airplanes and helicopters are scheduled to be based at Comox by mid-July.

Meanwhile, a search and rescue helicopter now based at Comox, left here yesterday for Suffield, Alta., where it will take part in the test of a 500-ton TNT blast scheduled for July 16.

UNDERGOES TEST

During the past few weeks, a Neptune reconnaissance aircraft from 407 Maritime Patrol at Comox, which will fly over the test explosion at an altitude of 18,000 feet, has been undergoing preparations at experimental and proving grounds at Cold Lake, Alta.

Funeral Held For Janitor

PORT ALBERNI — Funeral services were held Tuesday for hotel janitor Alton Rutherford Grindle, a resident of the Alberni Valley for the past 12 years.

Born in Minnesota 74 years ago, Mr. Grindle died in Comox July 5.

His wife, Minnie, predeceased him in 1945 and he is survived by five sons, Gordon, James, Melvin, Lawrence, in Manitoba, and Kenneth, of Port Alberni; two daughters, Miss Innis Grindle, Flin Flon, and Mrs. Frances Graham, New Westminster. There are two sisters and 12 grandchildren.

Rev. Roy Rodgers officiated at the services in Stevens' funeral chapel and at the graveside in Alberni Valley Memorial Gardens.

concurrent with the first term. The charges arose when the accused hit a car in Courtenay and dragged a man two blocks before hitting a pole and coming to a stop.

Magistrate John Ryland said, in reply to the words of the accused that he had absolutely no knowledge of the events, "You must have known you hit a car." The magistrate maintained there was no excuse for dragging a man two blocks.

PORT ALBERNI — George Ursulak, retired after 12 years as a member of the city works crew, is on his way to visit his birthplace on the Black Sea which he has not seen since he came to Canada more than 40 years ago.

He left on Saturday for a three-months holiday around Teraspol. He will travel throughout the Ukraine, before returning to Port Alberni.

NANAIMO — Overture concert has been welcomed back to Nanaimo with open arms. More than 20 persons turned out to an organization meeting at city hall Wednesday night and all were in favor of re-introducing the concert series which was discontinued here after the 1962-63 season.

Mayor Pete Maffeo was named honorary president of the executive. Officers are: Lyle Wilkinson, president; James Capewell, secretary; Miss Dorcas Gorrie, treasurer; Mrs. Joy Wickham and Miss Lynne Waller, publicity; Douglas Rudell, campaign chairman.

The executive, Mrs. Hugh Heath, Mrs. Betty St. Jean and Henry de Groot are directors.

CEDAR — Power was out in the Cedar area for 1½ hours Wednesday night after an unidentified car slammed into a power pole on the Cedar highway near the Indian reserve.

PORT ALBERNI — A Port Alberni man had his licence suspended for three months when he appeared in court Monday morning charged with dangerous driving. Charged before Magistrate Ben Thurston, William Henry Cousins was also fined $125.

COURTENAY — Rev. J. J. Van der Leest, Calgary, former Anglican minister here, will celebrate holy communion in St. Andrew's Church, Sunday.

Mr. Van der Leest is in the district for the summer as chaplain for the sea cadets at HMCS Quadra, Comox Spit.

COURTENAY — Mayor W. C. Moore announced at a recent council meeting that $1,000 had been passed on from city hall to the Alberni disaster fund.

The mayor said that this represented only a fraction of the money going from Courtenay, because other collection agencies, service clubs and individuals had sent donations direct to Alberni.

COURTENAY — New vice-president of the FOE women's auxiliary is Mrs. E. Kasper, who replaces Mrs. S. Alexander. Mrs. Alexander was recently named president, but resigned her post when her family moved to Campbell River.

COURTENAY — Summer school started this week and 45 youngsters showed up for courses including English 20 and 30, mathematics 8, 9 and 20, and remedial English for Grades 5, 6 and 7.

Gagliardi Acts

Lady Rose Gets Reprieve

Highways Minister Gagliardi met 14 delegates from the Alberni Inlet and Barkley Sound Thursday—and agreed to meet them half-way on their plea to save the Mv Lady Rose.

He agreed to recommend a $1,000-a-month subsidy for the vessel, to keep it on the Alberni-Bamfield run.

Highways department officials had decided to drop the $1,900-a-month subsidy paid Alberni Marine Transportation.

HOLDS TALKS

But after talks with the delegation, which included Port Alberni Mayor Les Hammer, Alberni Valley Chamber of Commerce president Mrs. Edna Southern, and captain of the Lady Rose, Richard McMinn, Mr. Gagliardi made the compromise proposal.

He told the delegates that highways department statistics showed the ferry was not carrying enough passengers or freight to warrant such a high subsidy.

ENSURE PATRONAGE

"You people will have to ensure some patronization of this service if you want to keep it," said Mr. Gagliardi.

The ferry subsidy was taken off after completion of the Alberni-Bamfield road. The delegates said the road was not good enough for the necessary freight and passenger services in the area.

HAD TO ACCEPT

After the delegation left, Capt. McMinn said, "I had to accept his offer on a trial basis. It's better than nothing."

Barkley Sound logging operator Frank Sing told Mr. Gagliardi that 40 men on his operation were served by the ferry.

The area was only properly accessible by air and ship, he said. He showed the minister a sample of rock which he said contained 20 per cent copper.

RICH POSSIBILITIES

"This area is being opened up and has rich possibilities," said Mr. Sing. "You won't regret your decision. To take the subsidy off and close the ferry down would be a backward step."

Said Mayor Hammer later: "I only hope the ferry can continue to operate on the $1,000 subsidy. Captain McMinn had no alternative but to accept Mr. Gagliardi's offer."

Ferry Run Won't Get Boost

COURTENAY — A delegation which sought improved ferry service between Denman Island and Vancouver Island failed to get government assurance that any action will be taken.

The group was given "favorable receptions" by Municipal Affairs Minister Campbell and Deputy Highways Minister H. G. Mard, but was told nothing can be done to improve the ferry service this year.

The delegation included representatives from Hornby Island, Denman Island and the Courtenay-Comox Chamber of Comox.

Pulp Mill 'Polluting' Oyster Beds

CROFTON—Oyster beds here are being polluted by the Crofton pulp mill, oyster farmer G. B. Barnes claims.

Mr. Barnes said yesterday the oyster growers at Crofton will be out of business this winter because pollution from the mill hampers growth of the oysters and reduces their market value.

"The fisheries department is well aware of this, and a report has been forwarded to Ottawa by the department," he said.

"The fisheries department recently laid down requirements for pulp mills under construction near the Fraser River system to protect the salmon fishery and we are entitled to the same protection," Mr. Barnes said.

The oyster industry can be protected from harm caused by pulp mills if the federal government enforces laws which are already in existence, he said.

Race Tonight

Sooke's Set For Big Day

All's set for Saturday's All-Sooke Day festivities.

Organizers have dug the 20-foot pool out at Sooke River Flats for the water sports, and there's a half-ton of spring salmon and a half-ton of meat ready for cooking.

10,000 EXPECTED

More than 10,000 people are expected to visit the area Saturday for the events which date back to early settlers' parties in 1928.

Visitors will see the biggest logging sports event staged in British Columbia—and enjoy the traditionally cooked food.

INDIAN-STYLE

The salmon is cooked Sooke Indian-style—boned, spread and cooked over long fires.

The meat, which will begin cooking from midnight tonight, is cut into 20-pound chunks, wrapped in burlap sackings, soaked in the Sooke River and placed in a pit of hot coals.

OFFICIAL START

The day officially begins when Equimault-Saanich MP George Chatterton opens the proceedings at 2 p.m. Saturday.

But the fun will have already started long before that. At 6:30 a.m. begins the 24-mile marathon from Mayfair Shopping Centre to Sooke River Flats.

10 ENTRIES NOW

So far, there are 10 possible entries, including former Olympic Games marathoner, Jack Daniels, of Oklahoma City, but entries will be accepted right up to the start of the race.

At 7 p.m. there is the boys' 17-and-under two-mile road race at Sooke.

SATURDAY EVENTS

Saturday's events begin at 12:30 p.m. with the children's races. They include straight races, sack races, pie-eating race and will be followed by the women's novelty race, men's relay and men's half-mile.

Logging and water sports begin at 2:30 p.m. There will be log jousting, novice birling and championship birling.

Other events include: tree chopping with springboards, women's nail driving, men's

(Three other men, Jean Robitaille, Roland Dagenais and Clarence William Kraft, have all been sentenced to 10 years' imprisonment for their part in the holdup.)

GOOD POTENTIAL

"You are intelligent and have a good work potential, and you could be a good citizen."

In sentencing Carew to eight years' imprisonment, Magistrate Ostler noted that although the offence was of a most serious nature, Carew had no previous criminal record.

"HIGHEST CREDIT"

"The conduct and investigation of this case, and the preparation of material for the trial reflects the highest credit, I think, upon all ranks of the department concerned."

"I think it appropriate to say that because police are not notoriously over-praised, and I think when they deserve it it is not amiss to say it."

In sentencing Carew for his part in the $7,300 holdup of the Cook and Quadra branch of the Bank of Montreal, Magistrate Ostler noted that Carew had come into the plan "late, and without enthusiasm."

Jury Sworn Today For Inquest Into Traffic Death

COURTENAY—A coroner's jury will be sworn in Friday at 2 p.m. for an inquest into the traffic death of George Kistic, 66, of Cumberland who was involved in a two-car crash near Miracle Beach Wednesday.

Mr. Kistic died in St. Joseph's Hospital in Victoria Thursday.

He was rushed to Victoria from St. Joseph's Hospital Courtenay, Wednesday afternoon.

Courtenay Coroner T. A. Menzies said Thursday night an autopsy had been performed. He said a viewing would take place in Sutton's funeral parlor after the jury was sworn in. The inquest will then be adjourned until a witness is released from St. Joseph's Hospital in Courtenay.

The witness, John Hunjat, 63, of Cumberland, was a passenger in the Kistic car.

Mac-Powell Gets Steam Up

PORT ALBERNI—Steam once again is rising from the Mac-Millan, Bloedel and Powell River Ltd. plants here and thousands of workers are expected last night that steam plant employees and maintenance men, and kraft plant employees, should report at 8 a.m. today.

A company spokesman said last night that steam plant employees and maintenance men, and kraft plant employees, should report at 8 a.m. today.

Most of the other employees have been asked to get in touch with their supervisors to find out when they should check in for work.

Pipe fitters are asked to report for work, and pulp and paper office division workers are asked to report at the usual time today.

The plywood plant C shift started at 1 a.m. today, and A shift was to come in at 8 a.m. The workers on B shift were to be contacted.

RESUME MONDAY

Sproat Lake Division, Franklin Lake Division and Kennedy Lake Division will resume work Monday, at the regular hours.

Somass sawmill and shingle mill will start work at 8 a.m. today; the Alberni Pacific sawmill division morning shift reports at 7:45 a.m., and the afternoon shift will start at 4:45 p.m.

Personnel in the planer mill are to be contacted.

TOWN QUIET

Most workers went home for a good night's sleep last night; there was no activity in the streets and no sign of any great celebration marking the end of the strike.

Premier Bennett, who intervened in the strike, said Thursday: "Premiers should not get mixed up in these things. It is only the second time in 12 years I have intervened in a strike. However, I'm very happy it was settled so quickly."

The convention approved the idea and passed it along to the provincial cabinet, where it died.

The matter of labor courts was considered by council several years ago. At that time it received aldermanic approval and was passed along to the UBCM convention.

Victoria May Take Lead

Wanted: Real Labor Court

By A. H. MURPHY

Victoria city council may take the lead in urging machinery whereby costly strikes, such as the one which cost the Alberni area $15,000,000, would be settled in labor courts.

Council agreed to consider in committee a recommendation to the Union of British Columbia Municipalities, which meets in Burnaby in September, that courts be set up and major strikes be dealt with on a judicial basis.

MOST COSTLY WAY

Twenty years hence, said Ald. Curtis, people will laugh at the way we now settle our labor problems. Strikes certainly must be the most costly way possible of ironing out difficulties between labor and management.

There were people on the sides of both labor and management who profited from these strikes and there must be some way to take the matter out of their hands.

The Port Alberni strike lasted 53 days and cost $15,000,000—a criminal waste of money and what it cost in privation and hardship no one would ever know, the alderman said.

Surely it was time that city council, as representing the people, took some action in the matter.

TIME RIPE

"The time is certainly ripe to take another and a hard look at this matter of labor disputes," said Ald. Millard Mooney. He was not opposing or running down organized labor, he said, but there had to be a less costly way of settling these things. He seconded Ald. Curtis' motion.

The matter of labor courts was considered by council several years ago. At that time it received aldermanic approval and was passed along to the UBCM convention.

The convention approved the idea and passed it along to the provincial cabinet, where it died.

Manager of Alberni Meat Market Jack Williams said that anything council could do to settle the disagreement with Amalgamated Meat Cutters would be "only too welcome."

They will, however, act in an unofficial capacity as they were told by city solicitor, T. P. O'Grady, that it was a matter entirely outside the purview of council. He added that aldermen could, in the interests of the city, try and bring about an agreement.

Ald. Baird introduced the matter. It was a disgrace to the city, he said, to drive down Cook Street and see this dispute going on month after month.

Toronto Strike

Paper Late, Greeted By Scuffles

TORONTO (UPI) — The Toronto Globe and Mail, one of three city newspapers hit by a typographers' strike Thursday, produced a thin single edition this morning and loaded it aboard trucks for delivery amid scenes of minor violence and bitter inter-union feeling.

La Presse Talks Off Indefinitely

MONTREAL (CP) — Mediation proceedings have been postponed indefinitely between Montreal's largest paper, La Presse, and striking members of the International Typographical Union (ITU).

When the typographers went on strike they said one of the main issues was automation in printing plants.

All Eating

Surplus: 2,134 Toads

LONDON (AP) — The British Family Planning Association announced Thursday it would like to dispose of 2,134 toads.

The toads, all shy, retiring females, came from South Africa and are of a variety known as xenopus laevis. They have skins of a pleasant grey-green, are four inches long, weigh five ounces each and never utter a sound. It takes one small piece of liver a week to feed them.

The association began importing xenopus laevis by the hundreds years ago for use in pregnancy tests. For this purpose the amiable little amphibians worked fine.

Recently British researchers came up with a chemical pregnancy test which in one swoop made xenopus laevis obsolete.

The chemical test works just as well as the toad test, and the chemical gets along nicely with no liver ration.

The problem, then, was what to do with 2,134 toads still lolling around eating 2,134 portions of liver every week. A plea for help went out from R. C. Elstone, a retired brigadier-general who is general secretary of the association.

"This," he said, "is one of the toughest assignments I have ever been faced with and that includes 40 years in the British army. We urgently desire to divest ourselves of these toads but we can't, for instance, have brigades of small boys coming down after them in buckets, now can we?"

The Star, Canada's largest daily, and the Telegram were expected to follow suit later today in a bid to print their papers without the International Typographical Union. The 680 ITU members employed by the three papers walked off their jobs Thursday in a dispute over automation of part of the type-setting operation.

MACHINES DAMAGED
The Globe revealed this morning that several machines in the type-setting department were found to be damaged after the compositors walked out. The Telegram also reported mechanical trouble.

The Globe's composing room was staffed Thursday night by editorial employees and management, but all other unions stayed on the job. A cheer sounded through the press room when the first papers rolled off the giant press.

JEERS, SCUFFLES

Truckers hauled the papers away through jeering ITU pickets. Scuffles broke out several times between members of different unions, and several members were carted off in police paddy wagons.

Shortly after the papers appeared on the loading ramp, three members of the Globe management appeared in front of the ramp to face pickets and about 100 small-hour spectators. ITU members milled around the trio, shouting "scab" and "you sold us down the drain."

DROWNED OUT

Editor-in-chief James L. Cooper tried to explain the paper's position in the dispute, and now management intended to continue publication, but was drowned out by encircling union members until police suggested he and the others return to the building.

As they made their way back, an unidentified man swung at Earle B. Richards, vice-president in charge of finance. Richards was not injured and the man was hustled off by police.

CONTINUE TALKS

In a front-page statement in today's Globe, Cooper said, "As promised, the newspapers will continue to negotiate" with the union.

Tax Man Charged

MONTREAL (UPI) — An official of the local federal revenue department branch was being sought by police Thursday on charges of taking bribes.

Lucien Prevost, 50, chief assessment officer at the branch, is charged with a breach of trust and of accepting almost $100,000 in bribes during a 15-year period from Jan. 1, 1945, to May 11, 1964.

Ohio Delegation 'Freed'

Has Barry Bagged It?

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Senator Barry Goldwater Thursday apparently sewed up a first-ballot nomination as the Republican presidential nominee when the key Ohio delegation was released from its favorite-son commitment.

The action by the pivotal Buckeye state delegation assured the Arizona Senator of at least 40 additional delegates when the convention roll is called next Wednesday, and possibly all of the state's 58.

According to the UPI tabulation, that would mean a first-ballot strength for Goldwater of at least 735 votes with 655 needed to nominate.

It appeared that only a political miracle could derail Goldwater's bandwagon—and none appeared in sight.

It was a jolting blow to Pennsylvania Governor William Scranton who had hoped that Ohio would remain firm to its favorite son commitment to Governor James Rhodes at least through the first ballot.

DELEGATES RELEASED

But Rhodes announced only a few hours after arriving on the convention scene that he was releasing the delegates to vote their convictions.

Goldwater had roared into this teeming convention city Thursday with a flat declaration that he was "more confident than I have ever been that I will win" the presidential nomination on the first ballot.

Scranton 'Shocked' At Magazine Story

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Governor Scranton accused Senator Goldwater Thursday of "reckless comments" about war and peace which have become "a matter of grave national concern."

Scranton, who is trying to overtake Goldwater's huge lead for the Republican presidential nomination, called two news conferences to attack the Arizona senator. Earlier, he asked the GOP platform committee to reject Goldwater's philosophies.

In today's second news conference, Scranton demanded that Goldwater make public the full transcript of a June 30 interview with Der Spiegel, a German news magazine. Scranton maintained it was "leaking out in dribs and drabs."

The Pennsylvania governor said he was shocked to read a news report on the interview saying that Goldwater, if president, would tell the joint chiefs of staff that a decision had been made to win in Vietnam and "now the problem is yours."

Scranton said the nation's president is not the same as a chairman of the board, one who can let others decide when nuclear weapons should be used.

The Viet Nam comment attributed to Goldwater, Scranton said, was similar to other statements by the Arizona senator about control of nuclear weapons.

In his demand that the full transcript of the interview be supplied to the platform committee when Goldwater appears today, Scranton said: "We are no longer dealing in a game of simple Republican politics. Now we are talking about the welfare of nearly 200 million Americans."

McNamara

'Brink' Talk Backed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite sharp Senate charges of "brinkmanship," Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara backed two top U.S. military leaders who said the United States is prepared to risk war with Communist China to preserve South Viet Nam's independence.

McNamara told the Senate foreign relations committee at a closed session June 23 that the U.S. effort to save South Viet Nam "carries the risk of escalating to military actions outside the border of South Viet Nam."

DEFENDS STATEMENTS

In his testimony, released Thursday, McNamara defended statements made in separate interviews by Admiral Harry D. Felt, outgoing commander-in-chief of U.S. forces in the Pacific, and Gen. Paul D. Harkins, retiring commander of the American advisory and training mission to South Viet Nam.

McNamara was questioned sharply about the interviews by both Democrats and Republicans.

Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper, ranking Republican member of the committee, demanded to know "who speaks for American policy?"

BRINKMANSHIP

"They say something this committee has not been told is official American policy," Hickenlooper said.

"Isn't that a form of brinkmanship that they are playing?" asked chairman J. W. Fulbright (Dem. Ark.). "They don't wish to say that we won't fight under any circumstances and they don't want the president to pledge this."

SEEKING DETERRENCE

McNamara told the committee that the U.S. is seeking to develop "a sufficiently strong military posture to deter our opponents from either political or military aggression, and through that deterrence to avoid a breakdown of the peace."

McNamara said no responsible military or civilian official in the defense department has spoken on a foreign policy matter without specific approval from the highest ranks of the U.S. government.

But he stopped short of saying that President Johnson had authorized Felt or Harkins to speak out on risking war with Communist China.

NEWPORT, Tenn. (UPI) — A four-engine United Airlines Viscount apparently exploded in flight Thursday night and sent its 39 occupants tumbling to their deaths in the rugged foothills of the Great Smoky mountains.

National guardsmen cordoned off the area while FBI agents and a 12-man Civil Aeronautics Board team investigated the possibility of a bombing.

The FBI emphasized, however, there was no immediate indication of a bomb, but said it was trying "to determine if there has been any federal violation" in connection with the crash.

FLASH IN SKY

Eyewitnesses reported seeing a flash in the sky, bodies and wreckage falling, and then a fiery crash on a steep wooded hill about 8 miles from this east Tennessee community.

The scene is about 45 miles east of Knoxville, where the airliner, flying non-stop from Washington, was to land. It carried 35 passengers and four crew members.

"I looked up and saw bodies flying everywhere," said Newport assistant police chief Alvin Webb.

Mrs. J. E. Wardrop said she was herding cows into a fence on her farm when she noticed a "flash" and saw the plane slam into a hill. "It nearly scared the cows to death," she said.

A state trooper said the craft "just disintegrated in the air." Dr. Robert Lash, a Federal Aviation Agency physician from Knoxville, said several persons told him they saw falling bodies.

FLESH ON TREES

One member of a rescue squad said bodies were strewn over more than an acre of the densely wooded ridge. Strips of clothing and flesh hung from tree limbs. "It was horrible, just horrible," he said.

The victims were so burned or mutilated it was difficult to make any identification.

U.S. Determined

Asian Crisis Seen If Reds Call Bluff

OTTAWA (UPI) — External Affairs Minister Martin said Thursday that the southeast Asia conflict could reach crisis proportions if Communist China underestimates the determination of the United States.

Martin, briefing members of the external affairs committee on the international situation, said he did not feel that further conferences, suggested by the Communist Chinese, would provide an answer to the problems in the area. He added, "no territory and no bases."

however, that China, as a member of the International Trade Supervisory Commission in Laos, would participate in any conference that was called.

He said the situation was dangerous "because the challenge is from an adversary which has become so isolated from the west that it cannot be counted on accurately to assess United States' purpose and determination." He said the U.S. government has clearly stated that "it seeks no selfish advantage in Viet Nam — no territory and no bases."

New Tough Policy Drafted by China

LONDON (UPI) — Communist China's top leadership has laid down a new "tough" strategy against Moscow and the United States in a series of meetings with provincial political chiefs, party and army representatives, diplomatic despatches from behind the Bamboo Curtain said Thursday.

Peking's party and state leaders, including Mao Tse-tung; his heir apparent, Liu Shao-chi; Premier Chou En-lai, and army and provincial chiefs, were said to have taken the new hard line decisions in consultations which began about June 26 and lasted several days.

Diplomatic reports said according to available on-the-spot indications two major developments appear to have emerged:

● Peking's leadership confirmed Mao Tse-tung's Communist ideological line as the only valid one and rejected completely Soviet Premier Khrushchev's position as totally unacceptable "modern revisionism." This could rule out any chance of a settlement of the Sino-Soviet feud.

● At the same time Peking denounced the United States as the "prime enemy" of the world's peoples and as the "most ferocious aggressor."

Equality Only Hope

LONDON (CP) — In a speech warmly applauded by African leaders, Prime Minister Pearson said Thursday that without racial equality the Commonwealth is not likely to survive.

The basis of the new Commonwealth must be full racial equality without any discrimination of any kind, Pearson told the Commonwealth prime ministers' conference.

But he did not go into specific cases—and Southern Rhodesia was not mentioned—as he raised the racial issue during his broad look at the world political situation. The racial question, which most observers see as the most critical hurdle for the conference, will be tackled in earnest by the 18-member group today.

BEGAN BUBBLING

But with the delegates still on the first item of the agenda—a review of world political problems—the issue began bubbling to the surface during the first two days of the meeting. Prime Minister Albert Margai of Sierra

Diefenbaker Wants 'Confederation' Parley

Let's Find Old Formula for Unity

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition leader Diefenbaker called Thursday for a pre-Confederation type of conference to find a way to keep Canadians together in Confederation in the future.

He told the Commons the conference should be attended by representatives of federal and provincial governments and all political parties in Canada. The delegates should meet behind closed doors away from the glare of publicity "to arrive at decisions regarding the future of this nation."

The Opposition leader made his proposal in a speech on a government resolution, preparatory to introduction of a bill to implement the federal-provincial agreements reached at the fiscal conferences last November and at Easter.

NDP leader Douglas said Mr. Diefenbaker's suggestion for a conference to study the future of Confederation was useful. It might end the constant haggling which now threatened Confederation.

Mr. Diefenbaker said he does not look at Canada as a series of sovereign states "but of one Canada" with equal partner-
